REQUEST I am scheduled to be present at a hearing beginning Dec. 14 in Orlando. I have observed that sometimes when a death row inmate returns from a few days at outside court he is kept off the yard for 30 days, and sometimes he will not be so restricted. In any event, if I go to Orlando for three or four days, I ask that I not be kept off the yard for 30 days upon my return. I've been going to the yard on death row for over eight years and never had any trouble. I can't imagine how spending a few days at outside court should warrant the loss of outdoor exercise for 30 days. To so restrict me would amount to punishing me for going to court. Thank you.

Your request will be handled in one of the following ways: 1) Written Information or 2) Personal Interview. If the complete details are not in your request, it may be returned with no action.

I am here at Florida State Prison, Raiford, Florida, with Mr. Ted Bundy. We are having a meeting and presently it is two days prior to his scheduled execution date and he has consented to share some of his ideas and experiences with us for the purpose of giving law enforcement a better understanding of people they may encounter in the future who have been involved in activities similar to those of Mr. Bundy at an earlier age. It is late at night and Mr. Bundy has been spending the whole day attempting to help authorities in other states resolve unsolved homicides as far back as fourteen years. Ted I want to let you kind of call your own shots here by way of background, your activities as far as homicides began and about what time.

Bundy: 1973.

Bill: And the first one that you recall?

Bundy: Be May of 1973.

Bill: And that was one in the Olympia Tumwater area?

Bundy: Yes.

Bill: Just for sake of giving the scope of your involvement and your obvious expertise in speaking from your own experiences and obviously those of others who have shared secrets, if I can use that term, with you. You have been involved, we have talked about this a few months earlier, how many homicides?

Bundy: Well, we went over this a little bit earlier and uh, well we came up with 30, I mean we added up, it's late at night like you said but I think that's fairly close figure.

Bill: Without trying to pick your brain too much under the duress that you have been in your obvious circumstance and the late hour, would you just try to summarize the, what states they were in, what periods of time before we move into more academic things.

Bundy: Well, I just really will summarize it. California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Colorado and Florida, between 1973 and 1978.

Bill: Ted's been kind enough to spend the last couple of days and perhaps the next two which he is aware may be the last two that he'll spend on this earth and he is determined to designate the majority of that time to assisting local law enforcement in resolving cases that he has been involved with. He has been doing it with the purposes of trying to resolve some of the trauma for the victims' families and also to assist local law enforcement authorities in actually understanding the scope of his involvement because there have been a number of cases for which he has been accredited with when it has been quite obvious and apparent that he was not responsible for a number of others that he has been suspected of. I think what I will do is just let Ted talk a little bit. I know he is tired and perhaps we will have an opportunity to do this in the future, about his feelings about what he has been involved in, that which was important to him, and molding his behavior, and whatever else he might share with us this evening.

Bundy: Yeah, thank you Bill, I don't it's hard to know where to begin we were I wanted for a long time to be able to be in a position, Bill, where I could be absolutely in a position to apply the facts of cases to the rather abstract conversations we've had some time to give some meaning to them. For instance today I thought it was and yesterday when we talked with Bob Keppel about the Georgann Hawkins case and today when we talked with that Lindgren, sure, about the Julie Cunningham case. I think there were things that came out that I could see had application to things other than the simple solution of these cases, the application to the, the, to other cases solved and unsolved, whether they were attributed to me or to someone else. I could tell that the officer was questioning me in the Cunningham case was laboring over the Do you remember that part, Bill, I don't know if you picked up on this or not when, I can't remember his last name, Matt Lindgren, it's a Scandinavian name. I was talking about today's session with the Colorado authorities in the Cunningham case and one of the investigators questioning me, questioning my veracity or just trying to learn more or both, they didn't understand why according to him that in the past that I had been believed to be someone who left the victims lying on the ground and did not bury them and why would I come back later. Do you remember that?

Bill: Yes, I do.

Bundy: And yet he saw some kind of inconsistency which seemed to him to be a, uh, detract from the credibility of the story. Is that your impression. He was having a hard time letting me trying to explain to him

Bill: He was. He was, I think part of that was that he had preconceived ideas as a lot of us in law enforcement do when we think we've got a signature series of murders and we assume that somebody's going to act the same way in every time. But of the thirty that you were involved in, can you have an idea of how many were actually buried?

Bundy: Uh, that's a good question. I mean a whole new set of uh, gee ten.

Bill: Ten burials of the thirty

Bundy: Just roughly, I mean I am just yes.

Bill: Ted, one of the things that came up in your efforts to assist the local investigators into resolving some of the homicides, particularly on a couple where they didn't have the bodies and you've been working diligently, using maps and recollection as to where they can find them. Uh, you shared with us that a couple of the cases, and I am not sure how many, but you opted to sever the heads from the victims and, how many was that do you recall of thirty?

Bundy: Oh, that's

Bill: I realize it's a difficult question because you are a different person now than you were then. But to search back and Bundy: Oh perhaps half a dozen.

Bill: So approximately twelve of the thirty had their heads severed. Were there any other body parts severed?

Bundy: Oh, you mean generally speaking?

Bill: Well, hands, feet, breasts, sexual organs, any other parts, ears, or whatever.

Bundy: I think that a lot of that kind of behavior that you're talking about was the kind of mutilation you're talking about was something which is rare in my experience, for me it's something that usually accompanies a high degree of arousal. I mean almost maybe a frenzied kind of state.

Bill: Is it a sexual arousal or just generally emotional arousal.

Bundy: How to best summarize it. It was even under those conditions it wasn't regular it was something that maybe only happened a couple of times literally I mean that is, but any way it was something that was maybe accompanied a high degree of intoxication and a lot of anger and frustration, perhaps building up a lot of other things and the weeks preceding that murder, I had

Bill: Was the mutilation part of the sexual activity at times?

Bundy: Again, it was extremely rare and it was not, it was not I know with some people I have heard it is their kind of signature but it was not something like that for me, but in those occasions when it occurred it was almost, outside of those couple of occasions, I was sort of frenzied, lashing out, it was more of an attempt to transport, conceal, uh, their remains more than anything else.

Bill: Now there were a couple of the victims that when they were discovered there were bite marks on them. Was that part of the frenzy or was there some conscious effort there to out of curiosity to experience the biting of the flesh or just to perhaps taking well some kind of sexual play a bit further than you normally would had you not been drinking or frenzied?

Bundy: Like I said, you know, we are so close, Bill, to being able to talk about everything and I can, I know what you are talking about, it's a good question. This is a Chiomega case. Let me just ask off the record here what Bundy: Well, let me put it this way, uh, when I back in the mid-70's, I never had the urge or inclination or the idea to bite my victims, and I quite frankly don't know why that would have come about. I know that some people consider that to be something of a strange aberration and, of course what isn't. But I mean how do these kinds of behaviors going to appear out of nowhere. I mean it is kind of bizarre for instance if you have a case where there are bite marks and, why would, you know, because they are a means of identification, but at the time of course a person, unsophisticated with those sorts of things-forensics, odontology-else you wouldn't know that. Ah, it's, I think it's a form of aggression obviously but it's a unique form, a lot of people do take it out differently.

Dear Ted,

It's been a long time since I had any contact with you, even though I have thought of you often over the years. I thought it would be nice to wish you a Merry Christmas and to tell you of some of the changes in my life since we last talked and perhaps find out how things are going with you.

Conditions at the Utah State Prison are different than they were when you were here. We have a new director and in an attempt to cut down on expenses, things are being cut back. We have built a new women's facility that holds 60 persons. However, this building isn't quite as secure as is desired, so they will be building a 120 bed facility for the women and will be using the 60 bed facility for the 90-Day program. College and the Vocational Training programs will be eliminated in about one month. If the legislature allocates additional funds, these programs may still have a chance to continue, if not, perhaps we will be looking at industrial programs to replace them.

The inmate population has changed considerably since you were here. We now have 15% sex offenders and about 15% mentally ill (although there is some overlap between the two). We have a good program for the sex offenders, but only a small one for the mentally ill. The prison is quite crowded with a fair amount of double bunking taking place. Overall, the tension level is rising.

My own work has taken a new direction. I have shifted from working with sex offenders to studying dissociative states. Over the past six months, I have worked with 15 persons who have multiple personalities. It is estimated in the research literature that approx. 7%-10% of persons in a prison population have a multiple personality. Some are very blatant and are easily detected (about one fifth of them), while others can first be detected through the "soft signs" (about three-fifths of them). In many of them, the alter personality does not come up above the surface and "take over", but will exert an overwhelming influence on the life of the person, especially if he has been drinking. These people often report feeling an overwhelming urge to commit an act or a crime. Some of them don't remember the crime they committed which brought them to prison. Often these persons have had "blackout" periods prior to their crime - that is, they would do something and not remember having done it. Sometimes these periods are meaningful (such as hurting someone), and at other times they appear to be less meaningful (such as driving around the city for an hour). When these persons find that they are not "sick" or psychotic when they have other personalities, they are willing to come in and have the situation changed. I find that it generally doesn't take too long to change the situation to the point that the underlying personalities don't have the power over the person any longer. Instead, they begin to work in harmony toward one unified goal.

The most typical question I run into is, "How do you know they are not faking?". First, some excellent research has shown that you can't fake a multiple personality, they are too complex. Also, the inmates that come to see me are not looking for a legal way out of their problems, nor for special recognition at the Board of Pardons. In fact, they don't want anyone to find out that they are in this situation. They simply want to get rid of the inner turmoil they have had for a number of years. I have been working with these people both in the prison and in my private practice, and I have found far more success with them than with any other group of people. I went to a convention in Chicago a few weeks ago on Dissociative States and Multiple Personalities, and I am submitting a paper to be read for the conference next year. This is a topic that takes up much of my time. If I were to tell you all I have learned through the people I have been working with, it would take up about 30 pages of space.

If there are some there in your section who feel they may have this situation, I would be happy to have them write to me. I will share with them what I know about this field and how this information might relate to them.

Also, there are many things about you I didn't get to learn about when you were here. If you would be willing to carry on correspondence with me, I would enjoy that.

Well, again, have a Merry Christmas.

Sincerely,

Al Carlisle

Dear Mr. Bundy:

I am a psychiatrist, and I have been approached by a publishing company to propose a new book on motivation for human violence. The publisher's interest is based on my experience working as a consultant to police investigations of "serial murder" and pre-sentence investigations of violent felonies in Washington State.

Robert Keppel has shared with me your ideas on the "Riverman"; I am a consultant on that case. Would you be willing to talk with me about motivation for human violence. At this time I would be unable to provide any guarantees as to ultimate utilization of the material from an interview of this type other than my own professional integrity. If you would have conditions, I could certainly attempt to meet them; however, at this point any interview would be preparatory to publishing. There is no publishing agreement, consequently there are no specific goals other than shedding new light on motivation for a technical book.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Ted,

Thank you for your latest. I was very interested in your many points and I agree that there was nothing really very remarkable about your early relationship to animals. I think all bright youngsters are bound to inflict cruelty without evil intent just because they have to explore and learn. That is quite different from someone of any age getting their kicks out of putting puppies and kittens in cardboard boxes and setting the boxes on fire or shooting arrows or a .22 through the box. Unfortunately, there are people who do those things for years, starting in childhood.

As for violence in general, Ted, I have no explanation. It is a human capability - i.e. war - and so much else we hear about. We laugh at small time drug users and pushers but they are certainly doing violence, particularly to kids. Answer? I don't have any.

I am well aware of the irony of our two positions. A glische here or there, I suppose, and our positions could be just the opposite from where they are now. I can't conceive of my doing the things of which you stand accused but who knows their true capacity for good or evil? It would take a very wise man or an absolute fool to say it is impossible for me to do or have done this or that thing without all of the stresses and history that goes with those things on line to play their part.

You write very well, you are terribly articulate and apparently thoughtful. Have you done any serious writing? It seems to me you have insight that could be important if you really do understand the forces to which you have been subjected and your reactions to those influences. Insight is a sad thing to lose. Put your energies to good use, Ted, write it down if you have not already done so. Having written rather a lot of books myself (54, I think) I know it takes sitting and sweating and thinking and facing oneself.

I do thank you for taking the trouble to write. I don't know if introspection is difficult for you or whether it is something you like to do. Either way, thank you for the insight.

And peace to you, too, Ted

Q14

Mr. Theodore Bundy
Florida State Prison
P.O. Box 747
Starke, Fl. 32091

January 18, 1989

Dear Mr. Bundy,

It has been my intention to write to you for some time, but I have procrastinated and now I find that I must write today if this is to reach you. You will not have heard of me, but ~~I have been friends with Tommy~~ Zeigler ~~for the last two years~~ and with Jimmy Lee Smith for the last several months. I also knew Willie Darden and, in fact, sat with him in the Colonel's Office in a room next to you and your attorney last March just before his execution. I am a free-lance journalist and have been writing a series of articles on the Zeigler case because of my belief in his innocence. You may know that a New York production company is currently filming Tommy's story as a result of having seen my articles which I had sent to Amnesty International in an attempt to gain support for Tommy.

Because of my friendship with Tommy, I have taken an interest in Florida State Prison and the death-row inmates in particular. You will undoubtedly know that although Tommy doesn't openly show his feelings, he suffers when those around him suffer and he sometimes shares those feelings with me. He wrote me a letter on the night before Willie's execution when he knew all hope for Willie was gone. Tommy is the eternal optimist and he had been sure Willie would be freed due to the publicity he had received. His optimism was contagious to me and as I had met with Willie twice and written two articles on his case, I shared in Tommy's suffering at the loss of Willie.

After Willie's death I determined that I wouldn't get involved with any more death-row inmates, but then when I passed a message onto Jimmy Lee from Tommy I added my own "hello" and the next thing I knew, I had a new friend. My connection with Tommy, Willie, and Jimmy Lee has been undergirded by the fact that we are all Christians. In fact, it was being a Christian that first drew me to Tommy--my being a journalist didn't come into it for many months until I felt that someone had to write the side of his story that hadn't really been told. Initially I contacted Tommy because I had read an article about him in my local paper in Englewood. My next door neighbors there were Tommy's trial attorney and his wife who had been the paralegal on the case. I hadn't met them, but after reading the article I became really burdened for this man, Tommy Zeigler, who was at that time (1986) under his second death warrant. A couple of months later, I came across a book called TWICE PARDONED which I sent to Tommy--you may have read it since you were on his wing at the time. I had no idea that Tommy was a Christian until he sent me a letter of thanks. We began a correspondence and a friendship--Tommy has been one of the best friends I have ever had.

I have told you all of this as an explanation as to why I am writing to you. The reason is that I have had a burden for you for some time--and most particularly since I saw you in person last March. There is a good likelihood that you will be executed on Tuesday--or if not then, some day soon. You are not alone in this--the Bible says "it is appointed unto men once to die and after this the judgment." There is no getting out of it--someday it will happen to all of us. And what after? I don't have any idea what you believe, but whatever you believe will not alter the truth. I don't believe God wanted us to have to wonder, and that is why He gave us the Bible. I won't have time now to go into the Apologetics of the Bible, but let's say for the sake of argument that the Bible is truly God's word for man. There is, of course, the possibility that you don't believe in God--but I know that you have a superior intelligence. I'm sure you are aware by now that the theory of evolution is not holding up and most scientists are abandoning it. So that brings us back to the question of where life came from. According to Romans 1, God put in every man the ability to know that there is a God because of creation. If I were in your position, I'd be doing some soul-searching right now--and I'd want to know if there is a God before whom I need to stand to give an account. And there is bad news for all of us because the Bible says that "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." It goes on to say that for sin there is a penalty and that penalty is death--in three forms: while on earth there is spiritual death (separation from God spiritually), physical death (separation from our body and those who are still living), and eternal death (separation from God eternally). There is no getting around it because God is just--sin must be punished. But there is also good news. We're also told that "God commendeth His love for us in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." We're told that God loved us all so much that He wanted us to be with Him for eternity so He provided a substitute to take our punishment for us. When Jesus died on the cross, He did it willingly--He is God and could have stopped it, but He chose to take what you will face on Tuesday--a criminal's death. In that day the cross was the equivalent of the electric chair today--and Christ willingly took that death for you and me. He bore upon Himself all the wrath of God and the punishment and separation that all of us would have to endure for all eternity. Can you even begin to imagine such love? Wouldn't it be unthinkable for anyone to go through his own punishment now that he doesn't have to? If someone was willing to take your place on Tuesday and that person's taking your place meant that all your crimes were forgiven and forgotten forever, would you insist that you be executed anyway? I'm sure you get my point.

After Christ took our punishment, He rose from the grave and lives eternally. This is important for several reasons: it means that God the Father accepted Christ's sacrifice in our place--Christ was the only acceptable sacrifice because He was the only "lamb without spot or blemish" in that He had no sin; it proved that He is God; it proved that He is able to give us eternal life. If I were to offer myself to God in your place to be punished for your sins, it wouldn't work because I have my own sin. When the animals were offered for sacrifice before the time of Christ, they were a picture of Christ's dying for our sins--they had to be spotless. Because He is God and wasn't born of a man but was conceived by the Holy Spirit, Christ did not inherit the sinful nature that all men have had from the time of Adam. So God Himself was the only acceptable sacrifice.

There is no way that I can make you believe what I am saying to you is true. In fact, the only way you can understand it is if God gives you that understanding. I can only pray that since God has burdened me to write this to you that He is reaching out to you. The gift of salvation--what Christ did for us on the cross--is extended to you as it is to all men. It brings with it complete forgiveness and the promise of eternal life with God. But in order to have this gift one must receive Christ. The Bible calls this being born again. Those words have been thrown around a lot in recent years--but what they really mean is receiving Christ, repenting of your sins, asking Him to save you, making Him Lord of your life.

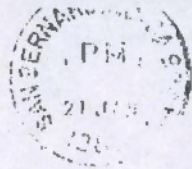

When I was 17 I was aware of the fact that I was a sinner. As hard as I tried, I just couldn't be good on my own. What I didn't realize was that it was impossible for me to be good because of my sinful nature. When I received Christ, I received His nature. As long as I live in this body, I will still have my old nature, but one day I will leave this body and all the God will see is Christ's nature in me. I will stand before Him clean and righteous and forgiven--not because of anything I have done--but because of what He has done. I don't understand why He loved me that much or why He loves you that much--but He does. I pray that before Tuesday you will look toward God and call upon Him. Ask Him about what I've told you before it's too late. There are no second chances--the Bible says that we have all had our chance so that we are without excuse.

I will be praying for you as I know will Tommy and Jimmy. I heard on the news this evening that you are granting interviews to some of the press. If you decide that you have any statement to make that you do not share with them, feel free to mail it to me and I will see that it is published. It has been my task to see that "the other side of the story" is told and I will be happy to do this for you if you like.

Most sincerely,

Dear Ted,

I was very sorry to hear the date has been set for your execution. I have followed your fate for nearly 10 years now—since the "sorority trial" was shown on our local P.B.S. station. I've read all the books, watched all the movies, and read any other article remotely connected with you.

I am now 28, and was myself a young college student at the time you begin gaining national "attention". I have to admit the attraction and fascination towards you has not diminished. So, after reading about you this morning, I felt compelled to write.

My own theory is that part of you—a totally removed Ted—actually did commit these crimes. Unfortunately, the rest of you - the handsome and intelligent Ted - is also paying. It's such a shame. As a single woman, I see so many of the same traits in you that I have been holding out for in a husband. Ironic, huh? I guess all the good ones really are taken. (HA! HA!)

I don't want you to misunderstand - I'm not one of those pathetic creatures that fantasize about criminals because they are so unhappy with their own lives. I am attractive and bright and my life is a good one, but I admit something about you touched a chord in me. I suppose there is something exciting about dangerous people. I'm not going to try and analyze it any further, I'll just leave it at that.

Anyway, I wanted to implore you to fight to extend your time here. Perhaps if you offer to give a full account of a few of the crimes. Tell them where some of the bodies could be found - or just imply you would be willing to. The families themselves would likely plead for a stay if it meant finding the remains of their loved ones. (Also, I wouldn't be surprised to learn you have had crimes attributed to you that were actually committed by the Green River Killer).

Well, everyone already believes you did these things, and you're certainly no threat to anyone or death row, so - do anything, say anything, but fight harder now than ever to stay alive! Your name will live on after you in connection with all this, but you have an opportunity to tell your own side.

With your knowledge of psychology you could benefit a great many people by telling not only your story, but also your possible motives.

However, if, in fact, you really don't remember doing any of these things, I can only imagine the horror you have suffered all these years, If a secret part of you had to be protected by your conscious self. If that is the case, you are a victim as well and certainly don't deserve death as a punishment.

I know this is very forward of me, but I just had to let you know that, no matter what, there are people out here that care for you and wish you well. I have enclosed a few things: some paper, a stamped envelope, and a poem I wrote for you this morning.

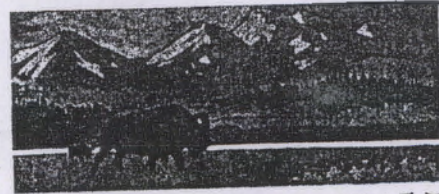

Words from you would mean a lot to me, but I understand the difficulties you face in the next few days, so, let me just say that I sincerely hope prayers are answered and you will be around a lot longer to tell your story in your own words.

God Bless You, Dad.

Ted Baby; I know things look bad for you in the papers, but you and I know its just another sham and a way your maggot (lawyer) can make a few more thousand dollars defending you. You know Ted; the State of Florida has spent $160,000.00 on you so far. You know damn well this parasite of yours is not going to let ~~let~~ this easy money slip away. Now the one worry you have is he may keep all the money and not pass any under the table to a Fed. Judge and this could be your down fall..He may be tired of you and looking at all the fresh killers: coming in. This being the case; find a fresh maggot. We are still trying to get you house arrest at a girls camp etc. Don't give your T.V. or other toys away yet.

Dear Ted;

1-17-89

Well I really don't know how to start this letter so excuse me if I babble a little, I'm sure this letter will be censored but I hope to get my points to you through it all.

I haven't written to you before but over the years have followed and listened and heard and heard and listened, and want you to tell you that they are still people who believe in you, no matter what the movies, or the papers or news say. Sure it happened but you take the blame for the whole, everything that happens. Sure I understand you were in the places at the time of the deaths, but I myself don't believe and even with all the resistance and debates with friends and family over your guilt, I have yet to be convinced of all that is said. I hope you get this letter, and hope you understand that there are people that think as I do, of these people that are so quick to judge you only stopped on considered, if you did indeed do these things why are they so many appeals, Somebody is not convinced and as my understanding of the law, that is reasonable doubt, so why do they continue with this, I don't understand.

I've seen pictures of the women that were killed, and at one time was very close to a Snohomish County Lt. and they still don't convince me. I guess some times people are so quick to find and answer to there grief they forgot to be open minded, Such as you case. No matter what the outcome of your life, what I hear or see in my future years, I am 55 yrs. You are a genius and a man such a man could not be all they say you are or do what they say. If you yourself know the truth, I'm not sure, Anyway. I believe in you and whatever the fate, you will happy to know that I give you my belly and blessing and prayers because my friend I may not know you face to face, but I do know you and I wish you the best of both worlds because you are loved by many in Seattle and as for me I hope all works ~~out~~ out, Your some kind of man and we all know it even the system that has its own doubts about you or how could you come so far and lasted so long.

I would like to hear from you if you have the chance and receive this letter, You in my mind and as painful as it would be to have you lose an appeal you will not be forgotten and remembered as Ted Bundy and without the rest of the garbage, Just a man who helped many people which should be remembered and will be.

Thank You I hope you understand the point I am making. I have no more words to express, but your smart enough to understand & not just a treasure hunter or have any motives other than to tell you my feelings. I wish I could help and hope this note has alittle . . . Bye my friend

Dear Ted -
me again, Hope my letters are not too much for you as yet. But it is about Valentines day and I need to get this off to you. I know you've asked yourself why after all these years I write. Someone you don't know, never met, and just a person from Seattle, will, although I have always defended you to all and they all think I'm a little crazy for my ~~being~~ belief in you still remains - I'm not interested in all the opinions of Doctors or the
the people that know you and there monetary motives
I do know the system and how simple people think and how narrow they can be, so well with all the friends they carry no weight with me. I've been told if I would of ever met you I would be here to talk about it, and again I say they are wrong. People that have done so much for so many just won't all is lost. Why I feel this way I don't really understand but there is a reason. I sure hope you get all of these or at least 1 of my letters because I want you to know I, and I'm these things. And sorry for waiting so long

Dear Ted,

It seems like this night be an appropriate time to finally write another letter to you. I can only try to imagine how you must be feeling right now, and I don't know that I can come very close. Twenty-five years ago, in March of 1964 when I was a foolish 19-year-old boy, two friends of mine and I got ourselves trapped by the tide in a small cave in a rugged area on the Oregon coast. The higher the tide got the further into the cave the waves came, gradually squeezing us back into a tiny corner where we stood for hours as the rushing water again and again filled the cave entirely. It was six o'clock at night when we first entered the cave and 11:30 the next morning before we finally worked up the nerve to plunge into the cold ocean for the quarter-mile swim to shore. We were battered and bruised, cold and wet, and suffering from exhaustion and exposure. We had spent 17 1/2 horrifying hours believing we were going to die, and jumping into the powerful embrace of the Pacific Ocean didn't exactly feel like we were improving our chances of survival. When we finally reached the shore we literally crawled out of the water on our bellies, needing every ounce of our remaining strength to win the battle against the pull of the ocean. Later we tried climbing a steep hill to get back to the trail we had been hiking on the day before, but by then we were quite out of it and we all lost our footing and tumbled back down to the bottom. So it was three half-dead and delicious guys trudging laboriously down a beach of football-sized stones who suddenly looked up and realized that a rescue team was headed their way. And it wasn't a moment too soon. A little earlier we had walked into some woods and lain down on the wet ground with the idea of getting some sleep - an idea we soon abandoned with the sure knowledge that once asleep we would never wake up again.

So I guess it could be said that in one 24-hour period a quarter century ago I faced what seemed like certain death and had to come to terms with my own mortality. And in that sense I can relate to what you now are facing, with the difference that my chances of survival were in my own hands. Though it didn't seem like it at the time, I had a big advantage which you don't enjoy. My opponent was nothing more than a combination of some of the forces of nature - namely, the wet ocean, the cold night air, and the inexorable pull of gravity. Compared to the forces you now are facing, and the raw power of your opponents' final weapon, my struggle was a piece of cake.

I also had time on my side on the night I found myself in that cave and a captive of the Pacific Ocean, though I didn't find that out until seven days later. Had my friends and I climbed into my 1956 Ford Victoria and taken our little jaunt to Seaside, Oregon the following weekend, and had we then found ourselves stranded by the tide in that tiny cave, we would have found ourselves having to hold our breaths for a very long time while the tidal waves from the 1964 <sup>Alaska earthquake</sup> ~~approached~~ <sup>approached</sup> the Oregon coast. Had that weapon been added to the arsenal we were already facing, I would not now be here writing this letter to you. I would be quite dead, my body long broken down to fish food, and like Eleanor Rose my parents would have had to bury a coffin without any remains in it. But, as I said,

I had time on my side in 1964, and it is mind-boggling to think of all the things that never would have happened in my life had time played a cruel trick on me.

The last time you wrote to me you asked me to find out the current last name by which Elizabeth Kloepfer is known, to do it discretely, and to let you know. You probably know that I lied to you when I said that knowing her former name was no help in determining her present name. I also had wanted to know what name she was now using, and you provided the only key I needed by telling me her former name. After getting your last letter with Elizabeth's prior name, it took maybe two minutes to find out all kinds of things about her. So yes, I know her present name. But without ever having talked to her I also know that she doesn't want you to know. You may since have found out what it is through whatever contacts you have managed to establish in the Seattle area, but there were many reasons, aside from Elizabeth's privacy, why I could not be the one to provide you with the information. Without mentioning why, suffice it to say that I would have found myself in quite a stew had I become Ted Bundy's informant in this matter. Or perhaps pickle would be a better word. My goose would have been cooked for sure. That, as they say, might have been all she wrote.

On page 449 of the 1984 Seattle phone book there are many people by the name of Levy, and the very last name on page 545 is Nalsund. Elizabeth is not listed in the phone book, but if she were her name would be somewhere among the approximately 40,000 names listed on those 97 pages. I know you probably don't have much time left, but that's the best I can do.

I hope you will find the time to write back to me before it is too late. You should, you know. I am one of the few people capable of understanding you. Under other circumstances we might have become friends. Thanks for the Christmas card you sent me in 1987. I was quite surprised. Good luck to you in your strange version of the survival game. I see you have wisely held a strong card in the hole, but I am afraid you may have waited too waves you have had to deal with have at least been predictable, but the tidal wave that is now tolling your way may simply be none-enduring than your ability to hold your breath.

"Like a bird without a nest,
Like a stranger in the night,
And my soul cries out for rest,
And the end is not in sight."

01-20-89

Dear Ted:

I'm sitting here in the living room trying to stay awake long enough to write you this letter. We have to take the cats to the vet tomorrow morning, so that means I will be late for work.

I hope you are keeping cool and thinking good thoughts.

Today I thought a lot about B.H. Chandler, a really nice friend of mine, who died of cancer at age 26. He was older than I, and I thought 26 was pretty old! We were supposed to take his jeep and go riding up and down old logging roads on the mountains, but I never got to go. Now I'm 52, and I have been allowed to live twice as long as he!

Another friend, Eugene Jones, drowned in Ridgecrest Lake here at age 16. I beat out Eugene so far by 36 years!

So it's all relative, right? You're 42 now, I'm 52. We've had some good years, some bad years. The worst pain I ever had was from my ruptured disc last June, 1988. The most pleasure I ever had ~~was~~ was 4½ years of a relationship with a 5'10" blonde I knew well over that period of time. The best food I ever had was my mother's home cooking.

It is a pleasure to know you, Ted, even though it's only on paper like this. I enjoy writing you even if you don't write often. My wife said to give you her regards, as did Martha Dean, a 6' redhead at work who is a pleasant soul, and June Ratchiffe, a purchasing agent whom you wrote some years ago.

When you get right down to it, a lot of people sometimes care for people whom they've never met but somehow feel emotions for. I have a great affection for Ronald Reagan, Tom Selleck, and Mary Tyler Moore; as well as others.

I get up some mornings wondering what is the use of it all and some mornings cheerful and optimistic. Sometimes I think that we can control the "goods" and "bads" in our ~~lives~~ lives by our reactions to them. Have you ever just sat down and thought about the big scheme of things?

Best regards and all our thoughts -

Dear Ted -

Another hectic day. The man who hired me is going to retire, and I don't know how this will affect my status. I guess I have the typical 52-year-old man's fear of being shunted to one side rather than being a useful tool at work. I like to have some leisure time at work as well as the next guy, but I also like to have a definite value

We grabbed a hamburger tonight before we came home so we wouldn't have to cook. We live on a very simple diet consisting of opening tin cans and thawing frozen items. It's strange - my mother has been gone for 8 years and I still miss her cooking. I have a friend who has a theory that a person's chemical composition ~~consists~~ consists of those chemicals, minerals, etc., found in the soil where he grew up, and supplied to him usually by foods grown in that soil, so that he is truly a part of his homeplace.

I hope you are feeling good and resting. By the end of each week I'm usually so tired that I have trouble getting up each morning (at 5:20!) to get to work. Weekends are welcome friends!

I know this may sound goofy, but do you have some sort of keepsake I might have? Any inconsequential thing such as a paper clip, piece of paper, anything you might want to get rid of? forgive me if this request is offensive - I think by now you know I don't mean to be.

I wish that you could have spent the time that you have spent in Florida in some other fashion than the way you have. It would have been nice to have been able to mess around on the beach, drink a beer or two, etc.

My wife has gone to bed, taking with her the 2 orange/white cats I adopted back last August or so. She likes to let them sleep atop the blanket until I come to bed (from watching TV, writing, etc.) and gently put them outside the bedroom. They're good company. Some men like cats, some don't.

Well - I'm going to wind this up. If I go to bed tonite and don't wake up, I won't know the difference, will I? I thought about that just as I went under from anesthesia when I had my back surgery. It's a great life at times, right, Ted?

Best regards -

January 18, 1987

Dear Theodore,

I have just heard the news - needless to say,
I am very sorry.

I do not know whether or not anything can be changed but I am writing two men of high degree. It may be out of their hands, though. I ~~will~~ will try very diligently.

I am not sure that I am not going to die soon. I have been terribly ill for over a week. I am having many tests. If it is cancer, it will entail operations and many unpleasant things. At least you will have to endure that.

There is no law to cover the circumstances that exist in your case. The question is whether or not the men who sentenced you know of the circumstances. I am ~~not~~ <sup>writing</sup> two of them of the circumstances. Perhaps your Warden knows whether or not they knew. If they did know, they are very immoral men. It is not meet to to take a man's life for something for which he is not responsible.

Believe me, I think, you were not responsible for what happened. I know it, other men know it; and God knows it.

If the Warden will let ~~me~~ you send me your family's address, I will write them
the truth.

I will be praying constantly for you that God will take your soul to Heaven and that He will give you the strength to endure this. Ask the Chaplain to pray with you - and tell them what I write to you.

Tell your attorney's your appreciation for their getting a second trial for you.
They would not have done that if they had not had your welfare at heart. Please thank them for me, too.

and please express appreciation to the Harber. He must have cooperated, too. I'm sure he will appreciate it very much!

May God please keep you - and may your guardian angel watch over you and deliver you to heaven, I pray.

I hear, I am going to tell you this!
this war or revolution is to change
the world to socialism - not communism but socialism. There are many people dying in this revolution - violently and quietly as I shall ("they" can give any dismay be something - I don't know more.

Anyway, all the people who are dying are soldiers - brave warriors in the fight for a good cause (everyone says it's good and I believe it is, too) - if that's any comfort.

I know how you've suffered - I've had 150 electric shock treatments, thinking I would be killed by each one. I've been afraid for almost forty years. But I'm not afraid (I think) anymore. I will ask God to give you the peace that I know. Loving Him will do it. I know you believe that He is the only one who can take your soul to Heaven. You are saved!

If the warden has not sent you to write me your family's address, tell the whole story to the chaplain - and show show my letters! He will explain to your family, the truth - as was told him.

-5-

of course, public opinion has much too much to do with your trial. It's an evil that can hardly be combatted. I am so sorry.

"But let justice run down as waters,
and righteousness as a mighty stream."

Amos 5:24

Someday, "they" have said: The blind will see - and prison gates will be opened wide - and then your Warden can sit back and remember the good he did at prison.

and praying.

I will be thinking of you constantly.

Please, God, go with you!

Dearest Ted,

I just heard the worst possible news a few hours ago (about the warrant being signed..). I was totally shocked because I hadn't expected this until next week - the governor's office gave me the wrong date.

I am extremely distraught right now. I don't know how I am going to live with this.

I'm far too upset to say too much at the moment, but I wanted to make sure you get this in time.

Ted, I want you to remember that I'll be there right beside you when you go to meet your destiny.

I love you and just want you to know how much you mean to me and have changed my life. Dawn.

Dear Ted,

cynical as it may sound, I guess I am writing this letter to say "goodbye" to you..... I feel terrible in that it sounds so cold, but if you don't get a stay of execution, I didn't want you to go without knowing I at least thought of you and wanted you to know it. Our correspondence since May 84 has left me somewhat confused in that at times I wish I could say, "YEA, I KNOW YOU DIDN'T KILL ALL THOSE WOMEN," and other times, I want to say, "TED, WHY DON'T YOU ADMIT IT?" To this day, I am not sure which is most appropriate and I hope you understand..... if you do get a stay of execution, I hope you don't write me back in anger and say, "YOU ARE JUST LIKE ALL THE OTHERS," because I really hope you don't think of me like that..... I really feel you are a friend of mine; just because I am confused about your guilt or innocence doesn't make us any less of friends..... I wasn't going to write to you at all before Tuesday and I'll be perfectly honest with you as to why. I recently read a book called "HUNTING HUMANS" by Eliot Leyton. I am sure you must have heard of it - anyways it profiles several mass murderers, yourself included, if you are one.... and in the beginning it has quotes from each one and the one attributed to you said, "WHAT'S ONE LESS PERSON ON THE FACE OF THE EARTH ANYWAY?" When I read that, I got really upset. Mainly because I didn't think you said something like that - I only hope it is a misquote but I am wondering if a guy would print it in a nationally published book? (If you didn't say it) - anyways, I just couldn't believe that you would say that. DID YOU? I am being honest with you - you can be honest with me; we can still be friends.... if you can't be honest with me, I don't want to be your friend.... I have a real hang up about honesty - I lied to my best friend about 10 years ago and almost lost my friend and I vowed I wouldn't do it again and I expect the same respect of me from my friends.... is that too much to ask? I hope not.

Anyways all that is neither here nor there - the fact remains we have been friends for 4½ years and I wanted you to know I was thinking of you in this very difficult time in your life.... because you were (and still are, I hope) a friend of mine.... despite what I've told you here. I didn't disown my brother when he killed Walter Robertson - I wouldn't have written to you if I hated you.... I just am confused now about how to feel.

I got a long letter from Anne Rule the other day and she said that she and I were two people who would have very mixed emotions when your scheduled execution is carried out. That is quite an understatement.

Regardless of what you have done or what you confess to or what they say you did, you wrote to me as a friend and I hope you remember me that way....

Diane

Dear Ted,

I have just completed reading my third book on your most bizarre story. Your life and story, without a doubt, fortunately or unfortunately, is the most unbelievable and mysterious in human history. I just read of your impending execution this coming Tuesday morning. I was really shocked. I thought the stay of execution was going to last longer, at least into the 90's. It was in December of 1986 that I first started reading about your story (in the books.) I am only 21. I think it was in October 1986 that you got your ~~other~~ last minute reprieve. Hopefully for me at least, you will receive another. I am almost as hopeful that you'll read this. I had heard that you got tired of reading mail. I'm sure any last minute appeals you are filing are taking up your time. ~~to read mail~~. Maybe if you survive, you'll not only read this, but be able to answer this letter. I cannot comprehend the death penalty. The state of Florida has ~~been~~ been plotting to kill you for a decade now. It looks like they are about to do it. Whether you were looked on the past as a martyr is not important.

What matters is that you are one now! Your cause,
As is typical of all martyrs, will be one to Abolish the death penalty. Ted, no one deserves to die, period. If, somehow, you survive this latest Attempt on your life, please send me a letter
so that we may start some correspondence.
If not, how about acknowledging that you got my letter in your final statement before execution.

God Bless You,

William Hubbard

P.S. Not a day goes by that I don't think of what you did & what you are doing now. I am ~~of~~ sure your "being" will stay with me the rest of my life. And I might be at the candlelight vigil on your last night.

RE: TED BUNDY

January 18, 1961

Dear Mr. Bundy -

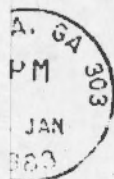

My name is Robin Weber and I am a Criminology major at the University of Northern Iowa and will soon be starting my education towards a career in law. This may seem quite unusual for me to write you, but I have recently done some reading about you, and I have become very intrigued with your life. However, I have heard the news of your sentence to die on Tuesday, January 24 and I think it is a terrible tragedy. As I write this, I am hoping it will not be the last chance I get to do so. I guess what drew me to your story, was that I, too, have a great interest in law and particularly criminal law. To be completely honest with you, I don't know why I am writing this letter. I just felt like it was something I had to do. After reading about you, I felt this need to know more and what better way to do that than talking to the man himself. I don't question your guilt or innocence, in fact, I don't even care about that. I am interested in you as a person and that's it. I am more interested to learn about you and the legal battles that you have been through. I understand that you have acted as your own lawyer in many of your trials and I admire your determination. If you have any advice to offer me for my upcoming training in law,

I would greatly appreciate it.
In closing, I hope and pray that this letter finds you healthy and successful in the times ahead.

Sincerely,
Robert W. Wether

Dear Ted,

I trust this note finds you as well as can be expected considering the lateness of the hour.

I've waited til now to make my inquiry because no matter what you have done you still had hopes for life in this world. I realized a long time ago hope is all any of us have to begin with. Now I believe you know the End of this chapter in your life is over.

However, it doesn't have to be the last chapter. Leave this world on a positive note. Tell me what truly happened in each case you are in fact guilty. What you have to say can be of immense value to behavioral research. Perhaps another soul as tormented as you must be can benefit from your courage and wisdom now. I truly believe, I more than anyone else, can relate your story explicitly, accurately, compassionately and with just the right flavor of human understanding.

I'm 39 yrs. old, college background, & adopted just as you were. Though I'm not a professional writer I have a knack for "telling a tale".

Should you decide to accept my proposal I will divide any revenues generated, by your story, into equal shares between your daughter, prisoners rights groups, victims rights groups, a JCD Bundy law school scholarship, and of course, myself.

You may call me collect, if only to bid farewell. I hope your afterlife is not one of torment such as the one you're now experiencing.

Sincerely,

Marcus Groys

January 20, 1989

Dear Ted,

There was a thief awaiting the imminent, certain end of his life about 1900 years ago. He waited, knowing he was guilty, yet fearing the unknown of the next part of his existence.

There was another man waiting for certain death that day. He wasn't guilty, but he was anxious also, for he knew he was about to suffer. Suffer not only the physical pain of his body dying, but the spiritual pain of being separated from all that is Good and Right with Creation; the all-powerful, all-loving, all-knowing God.

Somehow, the thief knew that the other man was different, that his destination, final destination was not unknown. In desperation, but in recognition of the reality of the other man's eternal identity, the thief exclaimed "remember me when you come into your Kingdom." The other man responded, "Truly I say to you, today you shall be with me in Paradise."

The thief not only knew the other man's identity, he also believed what he had been telling people everywhere, "For God so loved the world, He gave his only Son, that whosoever should believe (trust) in Him, should not perish (eternally), but have everlasting life. For God did not send the Son into the world to ~~save~~ judge the world, but that the world should be saved through Him." "He who believes in Him is not judged; he who does not believe has been judged already, because he has not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God."

God loves you Ted, and He doesn't want you to be eternally separated from Him. Believe, trust, give up your will to God in His Son Jesus Christ, and you will have peace both here and after you leave here.

God doesn't love us because we're good, He loves us because we're His creation, and His nature is to love. Like a parent who loves a child because of who they are, & despite how they have behaved.

Thankyou for allowing me to share this greatest truth of life with you. I pray you will accept it.

In the love of Christ,
Chip Mitchen

Dear Ted,

I trust that this letter finds you well and calm. I am also hoping that you will get a stay by late today or by tomorrow at least. Governor Martiney cannot claim to be a God fearing man when he only gives you 7 days to appeal his "death warrant".

The death penalty, we all know, didn't work 100 years ago and it doesn't work today. Small men with small minds made the death penalty what it is today - vengeance disguised as justice. You know we are one of the few countries, besides Russia, that has the death penalty. I still think you will beat this and be victorious in the end.

I read in today's P.I. and in the Seattle Times that you may get the chance to have a news conference Monday. The press says you just might confess to some "killings in Wash. State." My own advice to you, being frank and honest, is to be yourself, take charge and let the world see the type of person I already know you are: a human being worth saving. Millions of people, I know, would be watching such a press conference and you need to give them something they haven't heard about you. Let's face it I'd a lot of people think you're this big inhuman vampire because the press told them you are. If I were you I would dispell that notion by saying, "over the years some in the media have portrayed me as being monstrous, evil and cold and unfeeling. But I've never told you about the real me." Maybe you could tell them some about your childhood in Philadelphia.

You could say you saved one child from drowning, apprehended a shoplifter after he knocked over an elderly lady and you talked many women over from committing suicide while employed at a Seattle crisis clinic, hardly the actions of a cold, unfeeling person! I would hope in return that Florida would want to delay this execution by several years in return for any information you give them. That way there's a good chance the death penalty will be abandoned by then.

a delay buys you time and maybe even a chance for a new trial - so I'd go for it!

If Florida and the police are smart they'll grant you a 3yr. stay and gain valuable knowledge. You could tell people via your monday news conference to urge Florida to give you the time you need - get the people on your side and all things are possible. Maybe you could explain your belief in God who forgives all who pray for forgiveness - that sin goes away as soon as you have done that. Ted I love you like a brother no matter what, thru thick and thru thin! #!

You have many, many redeeming qualities about you no media lies or hype can ever change that. Tell them what they want but get their promises/guarantees in writing! I think you'll feel better getting things off your chest - call me if you want. I'm a good talker/listener - plus I don't judge people nor do I believe in using you.

I care only about you and right now you need a stay, you do not deserve this!

Whatever you confess to it will not change my opinion of you. By being straightforward now you only reinforce my belief that you are a good and decent person who still has a lot of promise left, a purpose in life. SO much gets built up out of popotion that people get to believing too many myths about you. My only question to you Ted is what, back in the '70's, did Seattle police do wrong in hunting for the killer of those women who disappeared? What mistakes did the police make that let the killer continue his destruction of women? I ask because I've always just wondered how these police could be in the Northwest. You would like it back home.

58° out today! Summer weather for here, hahaha.

Hey I found a few more good post-cards of our Rain Forests, etc. and I enclose them for you with this long, but hopefully not boring, letter.

I do not think this is our last letter by far.

Personally I think you will prevail in the courts so you just stay calm, do some praying as I am and by all means check out these postcards - they should help to bring you some happiness!

Write me if you need too, call if you feel like it. You are not alone in any of this.

This is when you find out who your friends really are - the people who stick by you no matter what. Count me among the friends.

Do the right thing Monday but Florida also has to do the right thing - postpone this unfair 7 day circus. Decease! New President today too! George Bush. We may do O.K. under him. Pretty windy up here this morning but skies are clear/blue.

My new house deal went thru, I can possibly move in Feb. 28th. Been working on coating cables for submarines at work - pretty busy there. We're talking about 12 hr. days! Well I'll close for now, take care, God bless and strengthen and shield you!
Your friend,

Dear Ted:

The week of February 22nd, I am going to be in Jacksonville for a computer seminar. I thought if you would be available, I could stop by and visit you on the 22nd, 23rd or both. Please let me know soon, if this is possible.

There are several things we could discuss at our meeting. First of all, I would like to know your thoughts concerning the rough draft of the form we have developed for the Homicide Assistance Program. The form is intended to record data from homicide files for the homicide information system and the solvability study. I have enclosed this form for your edification. We could discuss the merits of each item in addition to any suggestions you have about more items that should be included.

We could also address the information in your July 6th letter, namely, what it would take to have the Riverman give himself up and other suspects who have been arrested in other jurisdictions recently.

Please let me know if you are available for a visit so I can make appropriate arrangements with the prison.

Very truly yours,

Dear Ted:

I appreciate your letter of February 16. The last thing I want is any confrontation with your attorneys. The postponement of the February 27th visit is no problem. Any future date when you will feel more comfortable is fine with me. I'm sure we can work out a mutually appropriate date for a visit. Just let me know when you think it would be best.

In the meantime, in my January 28th letter, I mentioned your brainstorming for possible lists that you believe could contain the suspect's name. This computer comparison technique is an on-going process and your input would be invaluable. Please give this some serious thought and discuss this in your next letter.

Several recent cases are currently under investigation in Victoria, B.C. When I receive more information on these cases, I'll relate the facts to you.

Best of luck on your February 25th oral arguments.

Dear Ted:

I realized that I had not heard from you since I received your February 16th letter postponing our meeting. I am still interested in visiting you when you think the time is right. You have an upcoming hearing that probably consumes most of your thoughts.

I have enclosed a recent news clipping and am interested in your reaction to it. I mentioned in a previous letter what I thought of Dr. Holmes and the fact that you revealed to him that we were corresponding. Apparently, he chose this particular occasion to exploit his conversations with you. No doubt this garbage has caused strain on the [redacted] family, but I don't think Holmes thought about that. It appears Holmes is turning you into Henry Lucas' rival. I wonder if there is any correlation between 365 murders and the number of days there are in a year. No telling what he will say about you if you are executed. I hope some day you will chose the proper forum for the truth.

You have not answered my last letter. I'm really interested in the computer list project and your thoughts and input to it.

Re: Recently Discovered Remains

Dear Ted:

Even though you have not answered my previous two letters, I remain patient that you will. For your information, I have enclosed a recent article about the discovery of the skeletal remains of [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] was missing on 3-24-84 at about 5 PM from the location of S. 200 and Pacific Highway South. At the same time the task force was recovering the remains of a still unidentified female just north of the airport about 4 miles from the disappearance of [REDACTED]. What do you think is the significance of the discovery of the [REDACTED] remains? Do you believe that the "riverman" drove by the discovery site that day, 3-24-84, to see what we were doing? [REDACTED]'s body was recovered just off Highway 18 on S.E. 312 Way, just 1/2 mile from the Antosh site. S.E. 312 Way leads up to Green River Community College.

Hope this letter finds you in good health. I'll be waiting to hear from you.

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

November 21, 1986

Ted Bundy
Florida State Prison
Box 747
Starke, Florida 32091

Dear Ted:

I apologize for not writing to you sooner. Several interesting things are happening here that I thought would interest you.

First of all, the Green River Task Force is fully operational despite any news reports to the contrary. We are not any closer to a suspect than our last correspondence. No other victims have been discovered missing since March, 1984. The totals are now 36 homicides and 10 missing. Four victims remain unidentified.

Several projects have been undertaken since we last wrote. The Homicide Assistance program (HAP) within the Attorney General's Office has now accumulated over 210 unsolved homicide cases that historically go back 20 years. Local detectives fill out the revised VICAP form and submit it to this office before it is forwarded to the National Center. I expect by the end of 1987 there will be well over 400 cases in the state system. The information fields on the form are entered into a state computer. We can search any of the fields in any order or combination. Thus far, over 150 of the cases are female.

Agencies, like Snohomish County and Pierce County have submitted 100% to date. Others, like Seattle and King County, have submitted many, but they have many more to go. The city of Seattle has the most cases unsolved, so it will take them longer. At one time you proposed that you go over the unsolved lists with me in an effort to link related cases. The data base is finally getting large enough where this analysis could be very useful.

Two other interesting cases have occurred in Spokane. In January, 1986 a black prostitute was found strangled and dumped within eight blocks of a vice area, and as recently as November 4,

Ken Eikenberry Attorney General
Dexter Horton Building, Seattle, Washington 98104-1749
Page 1

another black prostitute was found strangled. On the surface it would appear that the deaths are very similar but the 10 month gap has the Spokane authorities perplexed.

Tacoma Police has been in contact with us regarding the investigation into the deaths of two 12-year-old females, both riding bicycles, and both found in local parks. Thurston County and Kitsap County have arrested two suspects in female murders and are believed to have killed in the past. It would be interesting to discuss these recent cases with you, especially as they may relate to other cases in the data base.

My Ph.D. study is slowly progressing. This quarter I'm into the law section and Charles Z. Smith is the supervisor. I'm doing a comparative analysis of the issues brought on appeal as they relate to solvability factors in serial murder cases. I've just reviewed the issues you brought in the Chi Omega and [REDACTED] cases. I would be very interested in your thoughts on how the police can improve their investigative techniques in the handling of "eyewitnesses", the uses of hypnosis, interviewing alleged suspects, and the search for physical evidence.

Another curious issue is the inclusion of extrinsic offenses with the regular charges. In some cases, they appear to be included arbitrarily, even though there is evidence to the contrary, especially in the Wayne Williams cases.

I hope this letter finds you in good health and spirits. I think about you every time I hear the news media creating the circus atmosphere around your situation. I find the entire display repulsive. There is some solace in knowing that you are one smart, tough "cookie" and that the state of Florida has a "battler" on their hands.

Hope to hear from you soon.

Very truly yours,

Bob

Ted Bundy
Florida State Prison
Box 747
Starke, Florida 32091

Dear Ted:

Months have passed since we last corresponded. The past several weeks have been very busy for both the Attorney General's Office and the Green River Task Force. I've included a newspaper article about the San Juan Island Murder Case where Ruth Neslund was charged with murdering her 80-year-old husband, Rolf. It was a difficult case to investigate and even more troublesome to prosecute since the body of Rolf Neslund was never found. It was an emotional case for the residents of Lopez Island and left them virtually drained. My boss, Greg Canova, did an outstanding job of prosecuting the case. I'm sure that you would find his legal abilities outstanding.

Soon we will begin another case in Yakima County. This prosecution was initially an alleged horse-kick to the head from 1975. In 1984 I arrested the husband for murder. It should also be quite an interesting trial due to the fact there are many experts on cranial fractures which will testify in the case.

In this letter I've included some articles which indicate most of the Green River Task Force activity since I last wrote.

As you can see by the newspaper articles, the panacea has arrived. Your last letter indicated your thoughts on the influence of the FBI involvement and I must say that to date your specific thoughts are very accurate.

Since your last letter, there have been several victims discovered, one of which is [REDACTED] who was found in September of 1985. She's the first victim to have been found within the city limits of Seattle. As you might expect, the Seattle Police Department was quick to hand over this particular case to the Green River Task Force.

Ken Eikenberry Attorney General
Dexter Horton Building, Seattle, Washington 98104-1749

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

In addition, two other skeletons were recently discovered near where [REDACTED]'s skull was found back in 1983. About 100 yards down the hillside from where that skull was found some skeletal remains were located that were positively identified as those of [REDACTED]'s. The original search for some reason in 1983 had not covered that particular area. Along the Mount View Cemetery Road, east of the location of [REDACTED], the two other skeletons were found. To date these skeletons remain unidentified and are aged back in the '82/'83 era.

In your last letter you indicated it would be useful if we talked on the phone now and then. If you could provide me with the proper procedure for accomplishing this: who should clear the call, and when the most appropriate time to call would be. We might be able to arrange a conversation now and then.

You asked in your last letter, "have we given any thought to a serial murder movie festival?" The more I think of it the better it sounds. The logistics of pulling it off would be insurmountable. The current way most movie theaters are set up today is not an ideal situation for accomplishing such a task. Most are six theaters in one building, usually in a major shopping center where the individual movie goes park anywhere. Most of the cops that I've talked to would be excited about doing it although there would be some problems with individual rights.

I'm beginning to organize the collection of data on homicide cases in Washington State. You and I had talked in the past about some of the limitations of the VICAP Program. I would be extremely interested in your thoughts about how we could most precisely accumulate data on homicide cases so we might be able to more accurately trace cases that would be associated with one another. Several forms have been utilized by various states and I would be interested in your impressions of a way to accomplish this task. At the present time if someone were to call a police agency in the Seattle/Tacoma area, or anywhere in this state for that matter, and claim that they would have killed somebody back in, say 1969, there would be absolutely no way to retrieve that information short of calling every police agency in the state. You can see the dilemma that exists. Agencies have not traditionally kept statistics on a statewide basis. Your input on this matter would be deeply appreciated.

I have included in the materials I've sent you a Homicide Report Form from the state of Oregon. It appears on the one hand to have a lot of information that is just nice to know instead of information that is useful in accumulating data on linking cases together. What I'd like for you to do is to look the form over and make marks on it, make additions to it, or edit it in any way that you want to. Identify what would be most beneficial for our own project. Not only will this project ultimately help the entire state in understanding the homicide problem more, it will also have a short term effect in assisting the Green River Task Force in accumulating information about deaths throughout the state. As soon as I hear from you about how to properly call you on the telephone we can speak on the phone about the various blocks that exist on the form and discuss their merits. At that time you can tell me your thoughts as to additions or deletions to the form that would be most beneficial. In the event you are unable to make a phone call, the mail will have to suffice for now.

I'll be waiting to hear from you. Thank you for your cooperation. Take care.

Dear Ted:

Thought you would be interested in the recent developments in the Green River cases. I have not received correspondence from you since I mailed a letter dated May 29, 1985. I hope everything is well with you and you have the time to address the questions in that letter.

As you can see by the enclosures, the Task Force has been quite busy investigating the implications of the bone finds in the Portland area. If these cases prove out to be linked, your assessment of the river man's range is right on.

There have been two separate bone finds in the Portland area: 1) about one mile west of I-5 near Tualatin, two unidentified sets of bones were found in April, 1985 and, 2) about five miles from I-5 near Tigard, Bush and Sherrill were found. Both finds are in Washington County jurisdiction. The identification of Bush and Sherrill (on the missing lists sent to you) provides a dynamic and interesting dimension to the Green River cases. There is not much doubt that Bush was last seen on Pacific Highway South, but we are still investigating the possibility that Sherrill made it to the Portland area of her own accord. With this additional information, are you still projecting that the river man lived in the Tacoma/Puyallup area?

Bush was dumped 220 miles from where she was missing in King County. What does this remind you of?

I am always interested in your concerns and ideas. Take care.

Dear Ted:

Sorry it has taken so long to respond [redacted] your letter of April 17. I have enclosed articles on Delise Plager and [redacted]. Yes, we are very busy this time of year. We have been out on several bone finds but they were not connected to the Green River cases. I was a little apprehensive you had not received my March 19 letter since your address requirements had changed.

The obvious question facing us now is, "Is the killer still here?" December 23, 1983 is our last known victim. We seem no more effective today than we were in 1974 to determine if the suspect has moved on. Your feelings on this matter would be appreciated. I realize there are the traditional theories of inactivity: he's dead, hospitalized, jailed, disposing bodies better, and moved on. But what is going through this guy's mind after 45+ successes? If he is still alive, what do you think his behavior is like now?

In your letter you said you could "elaborate on the possible explanation for the phenomenon of unknown and missing victims in series murders, of bodies disposed of and never found." What are your thoughts in this area? The unfound body of a missing person causes the most heat from the concerned family. Also, the political climate at the time and departmental policy influences the police follow-up of the potential series murder victim's disappearance.

The Seattle papers of May 9 and 10 carried articles about your appeal in the [redacted] case. It is unclear to me about your current status. You probably know Florida law far better than I; could you please clarify what remaining legal steps you have? Is there a probable timetable of the future I should be concerned with?

I do understand how hard it is for you to write when you are provided with so few facts about Green River. Our current forum of supplying you with the latest victims' news articles plus the lists I have sent is a poor methodology for analysis. Your degree of confidentiality is respected by all of us. I was a little surprised to get a call from Dr. Holmes of the University of Louisville. He said he had talked with you and you told him you had spoken to me about Green River. I was relieved when he said you had not told him what we were talking about. Frankly, I am pleasantly surprised our correspondence has not reached news media hands. Your name generates instant curiosity in the Seattle area.

Your proposals, ideas, and hypotheses in the Green River case are highly valued by the Task Force. So when it appears to you to offer nothing of value, you should keep in mind that whatever you say about the case is evaluated based upon what you are supplied with and is greatly appreciated. Your logic in a dynamic murder investigation is invaluable. You have definite original ideas which bear consideration for their utility.

On a personal note, I am quite busy between my responsibilities with the Task Force and the Attorney General's Office. I am also pursuing a Ph.D. program emphasizing homicide investigations. I would like to correspond with you some time about my proposal. It appears to be quite unique at the U.W. and I had to jump through numerous hoops to gain admittance. A couple of familiar names to you are on my supervising committee, Ezra Stotland and Elizabeth Loftus. I have been at it for about three years. At first, I was in the Higher Education Doctoral Program and then after 30 graduate hours, I was "qualified" to apply for the Special Program. If you are interested, I will be glad to correspond with you about my course of study.

We are extremely interested in hearing from you about the questions posed.

Thank you for your time. Take care.

Dear Ted:

Dave and I have received your letters dated January 28, February 3, and February 5, 1985. Since our last correspondence, we have been quite busy. As you can see by the newspaper enclosures of Gail Mathews and [REDACTED], the Task Force is not lacking for things to do.

You mentioned in your February 5 letter that you are puzzled about the Healy list, that it appears in part at least to have been compiled after your arrest in October, 1975. The entire list of codes were compiled prior to July, 1975. I would be interested in your thoughts or what puzzled you about the list.

Your constructive criticism of the list in that it did not include some of the things that you would include on a computer analysis for this case are well taken, and I will elaborate on their usefulness in 1974. I agree with you that thinning of a list of numerous suspects may be dangerous, pushed too far, and possibly could exclude the suspect. When we use lists, we are making several assumptions and maybe some of those assumptions are not to your liking, but we have to get a commitment for priorities of investigation. For instance, if we establish the priority right away that we will investigate suspects that appear on various lists, then the commitment must be narrow, and it must be based upon the criteria of interest (What's important now with the resources we have available). So if we are interested in the fact that a person in the same class roster with Linda Healy has been turned in as a suspect, is also registered to a Volkswagon Bug, and his first name happens to be Ted, then we would investigate that person prior to any other suspects.

I agree that if we could pare our list down to 200 or 300 or so, we would be able to interview them all. We made three specific computer runs back in 1975, all in the month of July. The first run was to tell us how many suspects appear on lists at least three times. That list totalled about 1,800 individuals and was totally unmanageable for a three person task force. The second list was to determine how many people appeared four times, which was a list of about 600. Then the final computer run was a list of how many appeared five times on various lists and we came up with a list of 25. Whether it was a law of averages or luck, your name appeared in that list of 25. We surely did something right. In my research of other task forces throughout the United States investigating serial cases, there has been no similar use of the computer. I would like sometime to explain why we had every code on that Healy list, so you would have a better idea of its uses for the Green River Case.

Among your lists of names, you started out with persons who had been arrested for assault, rape, kidnapping and etc., throughout King, Pierce, Snohomish, and Thurston Counties; these lists have been compiled in the Green River Case, and they were noticeably absent in the Healy list for several reasons. The number one reason was that our 3,500 suspects that we had accumulated had all been checked out as far as their backgrounds go and we felt that the name of the suspect was in our files already, but we didn't know where. In addition, most of the experts at the time (admittedly, they were few and far between and probably didn't know too much about what they were saying) said that they didn't think the guy had any criminal record. A third and probably most obvious reason was to attempt to collect a list like that from all police departments would have been next to impossible because of the time involved. The information available today is all computerized. In the past, it was all hand searching and would have been very difficult to accumulate. I would still agree with you that there is a chance that the Green River killer has been arrested for a crime of violence sometime in his career and so we must accumulate that data. The following eight items on your list are well taken and have been accumulated by pre-Task Force detectives and Task Force detectives all along in the investigation, so those names are available to us.

Concerning your tenth list of mental patients printout, this list would be next to impossible to attain today because of the privacy laws. It was not as difficult to obtain back in 1974. As you are well aware, many theories of what the killer was like in 1974 were explored. One of the theories was that he must have been a mental patient getting out of the hospital. As ludicrous as that sounds, people really believed that could be possible and therefore, we should divert our energies to that, so we made an attempt to determine who had been released from a mental hospital. The list we received was 1964 through 1974 of all persons released from a mental institution in the State of Washington. The problem with the list was, it was over 5,000 names long, and so the best we could do was to determine on a hand search basis if any of our suspects who had come up during the investigation were on the mental patient's list. I agree with you that he probably does not have a recorded history of mental problems and that this list may be useless for us, but back in 1974 even though the administrators wanted the list obtained, the detectives never did feel that the person was a candidate for a mental patient's list. If anything, we used the mental patient's list as an eliminating factor and a prioritization in determining if a person was on that list he probably was not the killer.

Your analysis of why you believe that the Green River killer doesn't have a recorded mental history of problems is about as well stated as anyone could.

Mr. Theodore Bundy
March 19, 1985

Your suggestion of comparing lists of people from the Portland area to the Seattle area is well taken and has been implemented prior to your letter.

Regarding your P.S. of the lists and inquiry of deaths in 1981, strange as it may sound, this list is not comprehensive and the reporting factors from other police departments frankly at times are abominable. Every day we find out new deaths that occur in other jurisdictions that we were not aware of in the past. This is frustrating especially when we think our list is somewhat complete and then there's just another one to be added to it. British Columbia is a different problem in that they have identified numerous deaths. We have explored several prostitute murders committed in Canada. One of our problems is that they do not have group dumpsites like King County does, and frankly, it is very difficult to determine whether or not they are linked to the Green River killings. It is our feeling that the problem in British Columbia is very similar and that we have explored leads in the cases from British Columbia.

Dave and I appreciate your correspondence with us. It gives us a necessary and refreshing look at this problem from a different perspective. I have included 10 postage stamps for your return letters.

Sincerely,

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

December 14, 1984

Theodore Bundy
Box 747
Starke, Fla. 32091

Dear Ted:

At last, I have received your letter dated Oct. 27, 1984. As of this writing I am as yet to receive your letter of Oct. 22.

You'll find enclosed recent newspaper articles regarding the identification of two Green River victims who were previously classified as Bones 6 and 11.

Kelly Ware was in the same area as Mary Meehan and Connie Naon. [REDACTED] was a Star Lake Road discovery. You can appreciate our previously discussed problems of identifying victims. These were bone finds of the past and were just identified recently.

The remainder of this letter will be a response to your letter of Oct. 27th and the questions you posed.

Your first question was "what kind of scene were the victims into?" You make reference to the fact that they are characterized as teenage prostitutes and ask is this really true. Most of the victims are definitely prostitutes and have arrest records for prostitution. The last 4 girls (Bello, Authorlee, Ware, and [REDACTED]) that were identified have kept this pattern. We have very few girls who were what you would classify as having had reputations, that is, party girls, school dropouts, runaways, and delinquents. It is clear that the prostitute is also a runaway, school dropout, etc. We have about two victims where their prostitute background is uncertain. In any event all the victims were street people.

I like your idea about the killer being very much apart of the scene or the fringes of the scene. This is as you would state elementary but is a very plausible theory that has previously been considered.

From your description of the riverman's behavior, I get the feeling that you believe how the riverman classifies his victims is not necessarily how we would classify them.

Ken Eikenberry Attorney General
Dexter Horton Building, Seattle, Washington 98104-1749

Specifically, how do you think the victims are selected? Do you feel the riverman has stereotyped women as "the only good one is a dead one?"

You mention the victims are women who are in some respects bolder, harder to intimidate, control and more mobile than most people as well as being inclined to adopt the "it can't happen to me" attitude. Does this statement mean that the Green River killer thinks these types of women are more provocative, therefore, his main challenge?

The riverman has continued to work in his own territory, and, as you state, in part because he is confident of his abilities and he knows the police aren't close. How does he really blend in? And what kind of friends do you think the killer has?

Your question, "what kind of people, especially men, were the victims most associated with?" I believe we have discussed this when we spoke in Florida. Your suggestion of pursuing a profile of the people who are in the scene with the victims has been accomplished in the past.

Your question #3, "did any of the victims know each other or know of each other?" The answer is yes depending on your definition of know. I think it is most closely stated that some knew each other but not to the extent of knowing phone numbers, addresses, etc. They probably had come across each other near 1st and Pike or on Pacific Hwy. South. Your comments about the victims address books are well taken and have been pursued.

Your question, "Is it possible to determine in the case of any one or more of the victims what lapse of time was between the disappearance and the time the body was dumped or buried, has been discussed when we met with you. But our evidence to this point would not indicate that we would tell one thing from another about this question.

"How are the disappearances of the victims distributed over time?" Initially, you can see by the lists provided to you, some of the first gaps in time have been filled with more subsequent identifications and discoveries.

You state that the sites are much less a mystery and give us the best chance to catch the killer redhanded. I almost get the impression that you have some specific ideas on what the killer does when he goes back to the body or site. If you could focus on the specifics of when he goes back; at what stages; how often; under what conditions; does he return on foot or by car; why does he come back; would he come back to bones or fresh bodies; does he have some kind of morbid need to watch the decomposition process; does he masturbate around or on the bodies; what do you think he is actually doing while there?

In your letter you mention methods for site surveillance and refer to protection of the body as a high priority. You state that the body be protected from deprecation by several means. Could you go into more detail on how this could be accomplished rather than surreptitiously removing the remains?

I have a meeting with the FBI tomorrow and will discuss the whereabouts of your remaining letter.

Thank you for your time to consider these questions. Take Care.

Dear Ted:

Thank you for your letter of November 18. After talking with you, both Dave and I realize that your particular knowledge of these types of cases is unique and enlightening. Naturally, we cannot expose you to all the investigative details. As we correspond, more information about the cases well come to you.

We realize the necessity for a special kind of trust between us that will have to be built over time. As this trust solidifies, more information will become available to you.

Per your request, you will find enclosed additional information. the first is a newspaper article about our latest victim, Martina Authorlee. The second is a list of victims indicating the significance of missing dates vs. found dates. It gives a slightly different perspective to victim lists. Wilcox, Taylor, [redacted] [redacted], and Kline are not "official" victims but could be. Reames, [redacted] and Anderson disappeared during our "list" times and could also be related. But as we discussed, confirmed victims are very difficult to determine. These named victims are all prostitutes.

The third list is female deaths 1973 through 1983. It is unknown how many of these are Green River related.

The fourth list is a summary of victims since 1969. This list is incomplete and was developed in 1975 after months of contacts. Police communications being what they are, you can imagine the difficulty experienced in 1975 at accumulating this list. Perhaps some day you may be able to shed some light on this list.

Due to your interest in lists of names and using a computer to manage the lists, I have included the list of codes we used in June 1975. As I recall, the name Ted Bundy had 2 "A's", 3 "Y's", and 1 AD. You also indirectly had a AB that I'll discuss with you at

January 28, 1987

Ted Bundy
Florida State Prison
Box 747
Starke, Florida 32091

Dear Ted:

I received your letter of January 14 and am looking forward to our meeting on February 27. I have already made the necessary arrangements with the corrections officials for Friday the 27th and Saturday the 28th.

In your letter you requested that I elaborate on the "solvability factors in serial murder cases." Quite frequently the successful completion of serial murder investigations is dependent upon (1) the quality of police interviews, (2) the circumstances which led to the initial stop and arrest of a particular suspect, (3) the circumstances which established the probable cause to search and seize physical evidence from the person and/or property of the suspect, (4) the quality of the investigation at the crime scenes, and (5) the quality of the scientific analysis of the physical evidence seized from a suspect or his property and its comparison to physical evidence recovered from the victims and the homicide scenes.

The important thing for the police is to determine what element or combination of elements will solve the cases. The methods that detectives use to accomplish this come under review at various times throughout the investigation process. For instance, the police may obtain through investigation a partial suspect description, an incomplete license number, a possible first name or a unique vehicle description. The manner in which they go about turning this clue information into the solvability of the case is what I refer to. The fact that there's an eyewitness to any of these events proves valuable to the solution of the case. The existence of an eyewitness is what I would consider to be a probable solvability factor in the case. Naturally, more prominent solvability factors would be being stopped with a murder victim in the car, leaving one's driver's license at the scene of the crime, leaving one's finger print at the scene of the crime, a suspect's confession, and so on. These solvability factors would tie a particular crime scene or murder directly to the criminal. As you know, in most serial cases, by the time the police find the victim, there is little or no physical evidence directly leading to a suspect.

Ken Eikenberry Attorney General

The issues brought on appeal by some convicted serial killers relate directly to the actions of the police at the time they confront the suspect, the manner in which they interview various witnesses, and the way detectives accumulate facts which contribute to the probable cause for search warrant affidavits and arrest.

Using your appeal in the Chi Omega cases as an example, you brought four issues, of many, which specifically relate to the solvability factors. Your separate points on appeal which deal with this were (1) that the eyewitness identification of Nita Neary should have been excluded because prior to trial she was hypnotized for the purpose of improving the quality and detail of her recollection of the man she saw leaving the sorority house, (2) that your right to due process of law was violated because an impermissibly suggestive photographic selection procedure was used which affected Ms. Neary's testimony to your prejudice, (3) that the trial court erred in denying your motion to sever counts six and seven which pertained to the crimes that occurred at the Cheryl Thomas apartment from the remaining counts, and (4) that the trial court erred in permitting the state to present testimony of dental experts who analyzed the bite mark inflicted on the murder victim, Lisa Levy, as it compared to the models of your teeth. These, in my way of thinking, are specific solvability factors that you attacked.

In a different example, John Gacy specifically attacked the methods in which the police used to obtain his confession and the fact that the probable cause for the search warrant affidavit<sup>4</sup> his home was factually defective. I hope this gives you a better idea of what I was referring to as "solvability factors" and how they relate to the police conduct in investigating them.

Additionally, you mentioned my referral to "extrinsic offenses." As an example, Wayne Williams was charged with two of the series of twenty-nine murders. Ten others were introduced as extrinsic offenses to the original two where the evidence in those cases were used in court against him. The problem, as I see it, is that the police had linked the offenses by M.O. and physical evidence. But if you look at the factors which were expressed by the Supreme Court to link cases, one of which was cause of death, two of the cases specifically were unrelated to the others. Naturally, through fibers and other evidence these cases were included. It would appear on the surface that there might be some question as to whether or not those two cases should have been included in his original trial.

There is nothing new to report from the cases in Tacoma, Spokane and Vancouver, B.C. at this time. We can talk more in detail about these relationships on February 27.

With respect to the Green River cases, you and I had mentioned in the past about how a suspect may appear on various lists of names that were accumulated during a police investigation. These names could then be cross checked on a computer to see if any one name appeared on more than one list. If you could brainstorm on what lists a suspect's name could appear on with respect to the Riverman, we could discuss these various list sources at our meeting. Examples of lists accumulated from body dumpsites and victim contact areas so far would be: traffic citations, field interrogation cards submitted by patrol officers, rape reports, assault reports, kidnapping reports, lists of vendors, motel registers, registered owners of vehicles, and "Johns" that have been arrested by the police. If you can think of more creative sources for various lists to help us in our search, it would be appreciated.

I hope this letter finds you in good health and high spirits.

Dear Ted:

Thank you for your letter of December 23.

Due to other commitments, the earliest I could come to Florida is February 27th. Please let me know if the date is satisfactory with you. Have any of the prison requirements to visit you changed? If not, I'll just contact the warden for arrangements similar to November, 1984.

I hope the timing of my visit does not interfere with any appellate business that you would be preoccupied with.

An appropriate agenda would be for us to discuss the Spokane Prostitute murders, the Tacoma Park murders and the newly discovered remains in Vancouver, B.C. (two articles enclosed) as they compare to the previous Green River Murders for similarities. Additionally, we can examine the unsolved female murders that occurred prior to Green River to determine if they should be included in the series. These discussions will not be used by me as an opportunity to press you about cases where you are a suspect.

I hope this letter finds you in good health. I'll look forward to visiting you at the end of February.

some appropriate time. With your insight and creativity, you could assist us in the Green River case with potential lists you think the "Riverman" might appear in so we could do a similar computer matching of names.

As of this writing, I am as yet to receive your two mentioned letters. I have been informed of their existence and have been assured they are on their way. Others priorities conflict at times.

The letters you mail to me are not opened by anyone else. My secretary receives our mail and she is trustworthy. She is currently transcribing the tapes of our talk. When she is finished, I intend to go over our discussions and come up with more questions for you that didn't come up at the time of our interview.

Currently, I would ask that you consider your profile of the "Riverman". Be as detailed as you can about his actions at the pick up points; transportation to dump sites and dump site activity. What's he doing while he's there? Post mortum behavior? Ante mortum behavior? Employment activities? How does he treat his vehicle? Souvenir saver? Evidence preserver?, etc. Basically, the what, where and when of prediction are more important than the why.

I, too, feel good about our discussions. The suspicions we may have had initially have been eliminated by your sincerity and openness.

When I receive your letters I'll respond to them individually with additional questions and observations.

This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter to the Green River Task Force dated October 1, 1984. Your request that any communications we may have be kept in "strictest of confidence" is absolutely honored. I, too, am concerned that any comments made by you could be detrimental to the Green River investigation.

I am interested in what information you have that could prove useful in apprehending the person(s) responsible for the Green River murders. In order to assess the immediacy of your assistance, could you provide just some facts about the nature of your help? I could, tentatively, visit Florida in the middle of November in conjunction with other investigative duties. I have made inquiry to your local FBI to arrange a possible visit. You may hear from them. The sensitivity of this matter was emphasized.

I respect your statement of "playing no games," and, frankly, playing games with you is presumptuous on my part and a waste of my time. I am interested in what is useful in resolving the Green River killings and what your contribution

Florida State Prison
Box 747
Starke, Florida 32091

Dear Ted:

Thank you for your letter of March 4, 1986. You'll find enclosed additional clippings from newspapers which offer more information the Task Force is pursuing.

In your letter you mentioned the sensational search of a potential suspect's house. I've included that article too. You and I have mentioned in past letters the suspect's familiarity with dump areas. This suspect would appear to be too familiar and not a likely suspect to dump bodies in his own back yard.

One question you have not addressed in any of your previous letters is "What is the killer doing when he returns to the place where he dumped a body? How long is he there? What are his reasons for returning?"

I will address the questions you had in your letter. You inquired if the Attorney General's Office had the legal authority to compel agencies to comply. No. What I've done is gather together a committee of five agencies (Spokane, Seattle, King, Pierce, and Snohomish Counties). This committee is responsible for policy formulation and strategies for cooperation. These five agencies have 90% of the known and recovered unsolved homicides that have occurred in the state in the past 20 years. Much to my surprise, the committee wanted to go back 20 years historically to get a data base that would be useable.

The software program was constructed using the new, reduced version of the VICAP form. The former 64 page form has been reduced to 16. THE State program in no way subverts VICAP but is supplement to VICAP. We decided to use the same form as VICAP instead of producing another form. Asking detectives to fill out more than one form on the same case is a bit much.

Ken Eikenberry Attorney General
Dexter Horton Building, Seattle, Washington 98104-1749

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

In an effort to identify what the software could produce, you mentioned several lists that I had sent you. They were constructed for various reasons by different people. One list that you received was homicides of young women in the Western United States and Canada from 1969 through 1975. This list was put together by my partner and myself in 1975 just to get an idea of what the extent might be of the female murder problem around our area. The list is very superficial. There was no apparatus in place that could have given us this information. We had to telephone each police agency between here and Tim-buck-too to see if (1) they had a homicide and (2) if they did, what was it about. It was our feeling at the time that the suspect left the Seattle area after July 1974, and this may have given us a lead towards another area. Also, we felt the suspect killed prior to January 1974.

Now, we ran into problems compiling this list. Some police agencies did not want to get involved and tell us about homicides in their jurisdiction. And you're right, it is a patchwork list which is not all inclusive. Your point that a uniform state-wide system of reporting could take the guesswork out of such lists is well taken.

You were thinking right along the committee's minds when you wanted to assure that the list also include a provision for people missing under suspicious circumstances. Your point about a perpetrator consciously or unconsciously varying some critical variable and this affecting the entire premise or consistency of the serial is understood. In addition, the person who analyzes this data will be equally perplexed by the fact that when the eventually killer is found, other crimes may very well be solved through the apprehension of this killer, and the M.O. characteristics will be totally different. This is one reason I want to talk to you specifically about 1975 and before. The analyst is probably me and I feel I could benefit from your input.

Lessons learned from the investigations of the "Ted Cases" have helped me tremendously in assisting other agencies in investigating these types of cases. The experience that I don't have is the knowledge and understanding of the other side; from the person that committed these acts. Understanding what the killer is going through can only benefit further investigations of this type.

Regarding your inquiries of the [REDACTED] case, I am currently in the process of accumulating the photos and maps you requested. I will probably have to show these to you when I visit you next.

Your proposal that you and I sit down together and go over unsolved homicides in Washington for the past ten years or so and try to link similar cases sounds interesting. You state that you could guarantee it would be worth my while. I agree, however, I'm not sure at this point, even though you say you're serious, how serious you really are. I do want to take you up on this opportunity.

Somewhere along the line, personally, I have to verify your integrity. We have been building this trust over the last year and a half. You and I have kind of a mutual understanding of your expertise, but I don't think that I can take the chance on the eventual revealing of information on another jurisdiction's homicide unless there is something in it for them. I'm sure you understand this concept.

I was quite surprised to find out you have been telling other people that you have been corresponding with me. I've been trying to keep it as quiet as possible and so far, have had no press inquiries. Bill Hagmeyer of the FBI forwarded your 60+ page manuscript to me. I don't think I learned anything new. Dr. Liebert is another, and, incidentally, I trust each of them implicitly. However, Dr. Holmes of the University of Louisville presents a different story. When I first heard from him, he was putting together a Ted Bundy seminar at Hilton Head, S.C. He brought together Fisher, Thompson, some detective from Florida and the keynote speaker, Ann Rule. When I heard this, I refused to go. I definitely wasn't going to learn anything and the entire affair sounded exploitive.

The recent movie based upon Dick Larson's book created numerous inquiries from police agencies. Several wanted to know where you were in 1967 through 1974. Several murders around Stanford over the years are close enough to keep contact with the agencies involved. I seem to be the perceived one with the major timeline of your activities. Your quarter at Stanford University, the visits you made to San Francisco in the late '60's, early 70's, and the citation you received in Marin County seems to attract most of the interest of California authorities.

I called you on the phone to get a better idea about the urgency of your request for me to visit, and, on the other hand, try to get a better perspective from your side to the time and under what conditions you want to talk about 1975 and before. I know when you choose to talk, you'll talk to whomever you please. I know that I cannot help you out of your situation in any way. I cannot offer you anything but my trust and promise that the correct information will be passed on to other law enforcement agencies. I intend to do this with or without your assistance. Quite frankly, if you don't wish to talk with someone who "partially understands," 10 years from now, anyone will be able to say anything about Ted Bundy they want, and worse yet, they probably will.

I've been thinking of a possible scenerio for Ted Bundy to relate the facts and circumstances surrounding the murders he committed, especially those in the Northwest. Hopefully, any explanation on your part would be very thorough and not superficial. (The Henry Lucas approach is definitely not appropriate.)

I would expect that any thoughts you had about any one particular murder would take considerable time, time for you to recall and reflect, and time for me to collect the necessary data, photos, maps, etc., that would be necessary for your case analysis. Having you in Florida and me in Washington makes this process difficult. But, whatever, we can make do.

Spreading the explanations out over time would allow you to be assured of my integrity ... take two or three cases a visit so I could return and verify things you may say; then you could feel assured that I'm not going to exploit this opportunity; then visit again to reclarify some issues; then consider another case or two. I'm not sure how much you or I can remember about the cases.

A major point is I am not required to tell anyone that you're talking to me. I know your appeal process may be long, but I don't see how your talking will hurt your appeal, especially if they don't know about it. And if you want to tell them, that's your business.

I feel that anyone who talks to you about this information is limited by as much as you care to relate about yourself. I would hope that July 2nd is not the timetable we are on, but we could begin before that. This proposal is more direct than yours, but I need to know how you feel on this matter. Plans are difficult to make, especially dealing with the bureaucracies that are familiar to both of us.

Dear Ted,

I'm sure you are surprised to hear from me after all this time. I've thought of you from time to time, & here lately you've been on my mind quite a bit. I do hope that you are well & staying busy, & that time is being kind to you.

My own life has been a roller-coaster ride this past year. I've found myself greatly disillusioned in some areas, & tremendously disappointed when the one person in life I thought I could depend on let me down. But there have been some
a Tom: and the kids

I had forgotten you.

I do care about you, Ted.
You've touched my heart & touched my life in ways you couldn't even realize. I've always told you what a very special person you are to me,
and that is still true today.

Take care of yourself, Ted. And just always know that you are in my thoughts & in my prayers.

Love,
Judy.

Dear Ted

— forgive the hand written note. I'm at home on a Saturday and will take advantage of this opportunity to scratch a quick note to you. I welcome the chance to extend the relationship & appreciated your letter of Dec 5.

I hope you know that the television program produced by the Stop Campaign was none of my doing. I have only seen a few minutes of the broadcast, even though I understand I am featured in one section of it. It was prepared by the Nat'l Coalition Against Pornography, and I am well acquainted with those people. I'll point out the error you cited.

The Green River program aired last Wednesday night, and I was supposed to have a segment in it. It was video taped in my office the week before, & I drew somewhat on the things you had advised in your earlier letter (regarding what the killer is thinking, etc.)

Dear Mr. Bundy:

Please forgive this long delayed response to the message conveyed to me by John Tanner. I sent you a brief note last August (did you receive it?), indicating that I was leaving for an extended trip to Africa and Europe. Upon my return thirty days later, I was immediately inundated by the accumulation of responsibilities at Focus on the Family. And now, I am at a retreat center in Montana with friends and supporters of our ministry. It has been a hectic Summer and Fall, to be sure.

Your thoughts and comments conveyed to me by John are intriguing from many perspectives. First, I am interested in you as a man who has experienced the love and forgiveness of God, through His son Jesus Christ. That makes us members of the same family, as you know. John tells me that your spiritual conversion is real, and that you are motivated now to serve the Lord even at great personal risk. I understand the situation with which you are confronted and admire your desire to help in the fight against hard-core and violent pornography.

I believe you are in an incredible position to influence the nation regarding the dangers of obscenity, Ted. Most Americans are totally uninformed about this subject. The pornography industry has attempted to convince the public that we are interfering with their Constitutional rights to print what they wish. Furthermore, they assert that the material we oppose is nothing more harmful than artistic, air-brushed, discreetly posed nudes of the type included in Playboy and Penthouse Magazines. You well know the truth. The depictions of rape, homosexual violence, bestiality, excrement and pseudo-child molestation are infinitely more offensive and more dangerous than the so-called soft-core genre sold in pharmacies and newstands. I'm opposed to all pornographic depictions and tend to see soft-core material as gateways to the use of harder stuff, but the greatest harm comes from obscenity which the Supreme Court placed beyond the protection of the Constitution in 1973. We are determined to rid the nation of those malignant publications in the next four years.

The exciting thing is that we are winning that battle! More than 300,000 people wrote the Attorney General after our Commission on Pornography issued its report. Better than 95 percent of those who wrote expressed strong agreement with our findings and insisted that the government do something about the problems of obscenity. For the first time in years, government began to act against the purveyors of smut. Dozens of indictments are in progress now, with charges being brought against the biggest names in the industry. Not only is the Department of Justice on the warpath, but the U.S. Attorneys, local District Attorneys, the Post Office Department, the Customs Department, and the F.B.I. are moving in the right direction. Citizen action groups, such as the National Coalition Against Pornography, are keeping the pressure on the elected officials and governmental appointees. We will not be denied in this drive to clean up America.

My point, Ted, is that the time is right for you to make your case against obscenity! You could tip the scales against organized crime, which controls 85% of the hard-core material produced and distributed in the U.S. Public opinion is the key, and you could be a molder of it. But to do so, you would have to throw caution to the wind and make the most emotional and powerful statement possible. That is easy for me to write and incredibly difficult for you to implement, of course, but in so doing, you could save the lives of more women and children than have been lost through prior misdeeds.

If, on your own, you decide to make such a statement, I will participate with you and help convey your message in every way I can. But you need to know this. I am a man of integrity. I value my word and my honesty more than I do my own life. I will never deal with you in duplicity; and I will stay within the parameters you prescribe. I know how much is at stake for you, and I will take no unilateral action.

Our greatest problem, based on the information John sent to me, is with the regular exchange of communication which you suggested. I'll do my best to keep up my end of that conversation, but my life is incredibly hectic. I'm now receiving about 160,000 letters per month, and answering even a fraction of them is overwhelming at best. Even now, this retreat

Mr. Ted Bundy

I'm attending was necessary for me to find time to express these thoughts to you. But, we'll leave that matter in the Lord's hands and let Him take care of the details.

What questions would I like to ask you? The obvious ones, I suppose. I'm reluctant to even put them in writing for fear that this letter might fall in the wrong hands. Basically, they would focus on your early involvement with obscenity, fantasy, violence, and how that experience appears to have led to the problems that followed. Please let me know if you wish to express these questions more explicitly. I'm sure you have presupposed the line of inquiry I would take.

God bless you, Ted. Let's see where He leads. John tells me you have obtained another reprieve, which gives us some time to get acquainted.

The next move is yours.

Dear Mr. Bundy:

Please accept this brief note as an expression of Christian brotherhood to you. My family is leaving literally within the hour for a four week trip to Africa and Europe. That makes it impossible for me to deal with some ideas I'd like to write to you later. For now, let me just convey this spirit of friendship and my desire to correspond in the future.

You are fortunate to have a friend like John Tanner. I have developed a great respect for him, even though we've only talked by telephone. He has spoken with conviction of your Christian experience, and that is exciting to me. The grace of God is an incredible gift to us as sinners.

You will hear from me again.

Dear Mr. Bundy:

Dr. Dobson asked me to drop you a note to tell you that he is sorry the enclosed letter of October 17 never reached you! It was originally sent in care of Mr. John Tanner, (at his law firm)..and he said he never received it! Therefore, I am going to try again and hope you receive this one!

Again, we regret that you did not receive this and apologize for any inconvenience this has caused. (Dr. Dobson wondered why he did not hear from you...now we know why!)

The man, I trust implicitly,
He sits across,
But facing me.
He never judges,
Rather sits complacently.
Once, I managed to frighten even him.

He took the time,
From week to week
From month to month and even years,
To let me grow more comfortable and relate my dreams and fears.

This stranger I do tell
My sweetest dreams
and yes
even my maddest idiosyncracies.
He has courage, too,
though different than mine,
Once a vile tounge
spewed forth venom and curses...
Oh God...It was me!
I asked him then,
Are you never afraid
to be alone with me?

This man I feel the safest with,
we play games.
His presence is stronger than mine.
I cast him in the role I want,
He stays he says,
"In the role in which I need to be."

This man he knows my very soul.
he answers me
before I speak.

Still...I hold some secret part aloof.
There always is some doubt,
Will he be like the others..
and leave me
Down and out.

Light red hair, long and shiny with sweat, frames his face as he rocks out to MR. BROWNSTONE. His tatoos flash in and out of view as he lets the passion of his music move him. His voice seems to change with each song.

Strong and virile on OUT TO GET ME, it is wistful and demure on SWEET CHILD OF MINE.

HE has it all, wants it all. takes it all. His songs speak of his experiences.

He prances across the stage dressed as he always does. Leather pants, A T shirt and boots adorned with chains and collars caress his body. A cross dangles menacingly around his neck. His muscles glisten sinuously under the bright spot lights. The audience sits enthralled as, like a wraith he sidles across the stage.

He takes it all in stride, as if it is his due. It energizes him until his presence lights up the stage. The energy leaps from him, crackling thru the air. It brightens the stage as shadows flee before it.

He dissappears from view, once again leaving a euporhic audience behind.

REQUEST

I have been suffering from a pulled achilles tendon for several months. It refuses to heal. I find it hard to walk at times. It is causing me a lot of pain.

Six weeks ago I was seen in the clinic annex about this problem. I was given some arch supports. The supports have not helped.

I request that my feet and ankles be examined by a podiatrist.

Thank you.

Today two R-Wing officers (Barker and Farrow) on the 8-4 shift seized items belonging to me and sent them to you "for review". The seized items are: two letters sent me by Martha Janner, some personal notes, and a white sock. These items are not contraband as defined by DOC Rule 33-3.006 (Control of Contraband). My possession of these items does not violate any of the provisions of DOC Rule 33-22.012 (Rules of Prohibited Conduct).

I am sure you have enough to do without being asked to "review" such obviously harmless items.

Would you please return these items to me. The sock belongs to the only decent pair of socks I have.

Thank you.

REQUEST

Every morning that an Officer Hunter on the 4 to midnight shift has picked up my mail those letters failed to reach their destination. The first night I noticed him working the wing several times and he went out of his way to check my mail. Since there were indications he kept the letters in his pocket I later asked to see the letters. When I did see them they had been folded in two. All folded like letters he had picked up have disappeared. Yesterday, I received word from my attorney, Della Nelson, that a letter I sent her June 2, which Hunter picked up, did not reach her. The letter to Mrs. Nelson was marked confidential. Please look into these allegations immediately. Thank you.

RESPONSE

In response to your above allegations ① On the first occasion listed above, I did not pick up mail, Sgt. Stokes did. ② On June 2, 1988, again I did not pick up the mail, Officer M. Crockett picked up mail. ③ IF, IN FACT, there were indications that someone may be tampering with MY mail, I would sure make an effort to confront that person, pertaining to that issue. As often as I have worked 'R' wing, prior to, and after the two above listed occasions, I have never been confronted by you in reference to this issue. ④ As to the coincidence of your mail disappearing on two of the nights I worked R wing, I can only guess that it is no more than sheer coincidence. There can be any number of reasons that a piece of mail might not reach its destination, not to exclude our vis. postal service either. In any event, I'll have to deny your allegations, and refer any further allegations from you to Inspector R. Davis, or Colonel A.D. Thornton.

REQUEST

A couple of wing officers last night replaced all the 25 watt light bulbs in the catwalk (on B-2 South with 100 and 135 watt bulbs. Now each fixture with two bulbs casts 200 to 270 watts and are like spot lights. A couple are so hot that the plastic covers are melting. None of us can sleep now after the lights come on at 4:30 a.m.

It is my understanding that regulations call for 25 watt bulbs in the catwalk. The 25 watt bulbs create more than enough illumination. 100 or 135 watt bulbs are clearly excessive and make it impossible for us to sleep.

Would you please replace the 100 and 135 watt bulbs with 25 watt bulbs?

Thank you.

RESPONSE

Inmate J. Bundy: In response to your request, Cat-walk lighting must be equipped with enough lighting or luminous to maintain security. It is customary that the row lighting or what is referred to as night lights be equipped with two 25 watt lamps.

The map is submitted along with this report. NOTE: Filing of report was delayed due to being on outside court. Report submitted upon return.
