Police here haven't ruled out 'Ted' link

County Police Capt. J. N. (Nick) Mackie said today that William C. Batten, charged in Grays Harbor County with slaying two Vashon Island women, has not been "completely eliminated" as a possible suspect in the deaths of at least six young women here.

Mackie said Batten has been eliminated as far as comparison with a sketch of "Ted" is concerned, "but that is not the only way we eliminate suspects," he said. He would not discuss the other ways.

A task force headed by Mackie has screened more than 2,000 of 2,373 "Ted" look-alikes. Police also have checked out 948 vehicles.

Mackie said the task force also is checking on every person who has been in Western State Hospital for sex offenses and released in the past three years. He said he could not estimate that number.

The task force will be disbanded May 31, and the cases handed over to two regular county homicide detectives as on-going cases.

Mackie said he no longer has any faith in the accuracy of the sketch of "Ted" made from descriptions of persons who saw him at Lake Sammamish State Park, adding "I never have seen one (composite) that worked yet."

"Ted" accompanied Janice Ott when she left Lake Sammamish State Park. Her remains were found later just east of Issaquah.

Government lifeboat stolen

A one-ton government-owned lifeboat, worth approximately $2,000, has been stolen from its moorage in the ship canal, it was reported to police.

The boat, owned by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, was on loan to Seattle Central Community College. It was moored near Northwest 45th Street and 11th Avenue Northwest. The 18-foot red and white boat last was seen Saturday.

No Link Of Beach Killings To Others

BY PAUL BOYD

King County police said yesterday there appears to be no connection between the stabbing deaths last week of two Vashon-Island women found on a Pacific Ocean beach and the disappearance and murders of at least six other women in the state.

Capt. Nick Mackie said the bodies of Tina Jacobsen, 19, and Gaelisa (Gael) Burton, 18, were found Friday on the beach near Mochlips along with their personal effects and articles of clothing. Little effort was made to conceal the bodies, he added.

In contrast, Mackie said the skeletal remains of six women were found last month in secluded, wooded areas near Issaquah and Taylor Mountain. No clothing or jewelry was found along with the bodies.

"We don't feel these recent deaths have any connection to our case," Mackie said. "Our case is unusual because it involves missing girls, whose skeletal remains were found at a later date."

"We are not dealing with murdered girls who were left with their clothing and other equipment."

Mackie also said his office sees no connection between the Washington missing women and the weekend slaying of Betty Lucille Wilson, 37, whose dismembered body was found near a Salem, Ore., landfill.

"There is no comparison between the incidents," he said.

Marion County (Salem) sheriff's deputies arrested Richard Laurence Marquette, 40, yesterday in Marion County (Salem) sheriff's deputies arrested Richard Laurence Marquette, 40, yesterday in connection with the murders.

Marquette was convicted of a similar murder in 1961 in Portland.

Mackie said his department is joining the Federal Bureau of Investigation in determining how and with whom the two women hitchhiked from Vashon Island to Moclips.

The FBI has entered the case because the bodies were found just inside the Quinault Indian Reservation, a federal jurisdiction.

One of the detectives in the combined city-county task force tackling the missing women case was sent to Moclips during the weekend, Mackie said.

"He was merely an observer," Mackie explained. "Just so we can keep on top of all of them." No one from King County was sent to the Salem homicide site, he said.

The investigation into the Moclips murders continued yesterday as some 18 officers from the Aberdeen and Hoquiam Police Departments began a hands-and-knees search of the area where the bodies were found.

A spokesman for the Grays Harbor County sheriff's office said that a house-to-house canvass of area residents is also planned, to determine if anyone saw the girls last week.

The department has received over 1,000 calls regarding the case, the spokesman said, and would like to follow-up on all the leads.

Blaine Jex, Grays Harbor County coroner, said a preliminary autopsy indicates the women were not sexually assaulted. There also is no evidence that they had been beaten or mutilated, he added.

The two women were found in a driftwood camp shelter on the beach. Ms. Burton's hands were tied behind her back. Ms. Jacobsen's hands were tied in front. Both women were clad only in sweatshirts.

In King County, Mackie said the investigation into the Taylor Mountain and Issaquah murders has turned up no new leads or suspects. The task force has received tips on over 2,300 people who resemble the elusive "Ted," the prime suspect in the slayings.

"We have no real solid clues," Mackie said. "If we did, we would have somebody under arrest."

Murder investigators probe some clues

By VICKI EDWARDS
World Staff Writer

MOCLIPS — Investigation is continuing into last week's double murder near Moclips and law enforcement officials have uncovered some possible evidence in the search for a killer. The evidence is being sent to a laboratory for analysis and sources say it could reveal important clues in the slayings of the two 19-year-old girls. Apparently something found at the murder scene by law enforcement officials led them to the now possible evidence.

MEANWHILE, residents of the Moclips area are still "shocked" and "sickened" by the brutal slabbings of two Vashon Island girls in a driftwood campsite on the Moclips beach.

Rumors about the condition of the victims' bodies as well as speculation about the killer or killers are flying throughout Moclips and nearby beach communities.

What seems to shock residents the most is that such a horrifying crime could happen so close to home.

A YOUTH walking his dog through the driftwood near where Gaelsa Burton and Tina Lynn Jacobsen so cruelly lost their lives pointed to dried blood on the logs and rocks that surrounded their makeshift dugout.

"There was a lot more blood yesterday," he said. "There have been lots of stories...that they had been burned."

The youth's dog scampers and barks in the sunlight on the sand and driftwood that bears only disappearing scars of the awful fate of two young hitchhikers.

"We're all pretty much sickened by this thing," said a man whose trailer home is just a few yards and hills away from the desolate murder spot.

"THERE ARE so many young girls who come here alone," said Connie Fox at Fox's Peak-to-Sea grocery store in Pacific Beach.

"They don't seem to be using the state campgrounds. And lots of them are hitchhiking. I think maybe on five occasions just in the past weekend I've seen girls hitchhiking to the beaches," Connie added.

"Some people around here knew the girls... they had been here before. I think quite a few people are frightened," she said softly. "I think they're scared. I have the feeling... that it seems like these things happen other places. It's just unbelievable to have something happen like that here," Connie added.

A YOUNG MAN employed at a gas station in Moclips said he knew the girls and that they came to the beach to camp "ever so often." He said he doesn't know if they always camped in the isolated driftwood area.

Rainer Heikel, a forester with the Bureau of Indian Affairs, pointed out the murder spot to television crews from Seattle.

It was Heikel who surveyed the spot not too long after the bodies were discovered Friday night and determined that it was within the boundaries of the Colquhault Indian Reservation.

FBI OFFICIALS then joined the investigation. Roger Duhan, a detective from the Seattle Police Department (who has been investigating the disappearances of nine other young women in the state since Jan. 31, 1974, also checked in on the investigation on Saturday.

"I hope whoever did this isn't someone from around here," said Louise Moorman, an employee of the Pacific Beach Post Office.

"You feel a little safe around a little community. There have been so many rumors. It was really a shock to me when this happened," she added.

"We get so many young people here, especially when the weather is nice. These types of things are bound to happen in the bigger cities, but here it's just a little more isolated."

LOUISE, whose husband is a retired deputy sheriff and currently a deputy coroner, says softly that she has a 17-year-old daughter who enjoys the beach.

"People might start locking their doors and staying away from the beach," she added. "It's a pretty sobering effect. It has had a pretty sobering effect on our youngsters."

Many of them, he adds, have frequented the driftwood area of the Moclips beach. "It's not unusual to have a number of people on the beach."

Recently, Budge says, there has been an influx of backpackers and "transient kind" of young people.

"They are becoming comfortable in the area. They are coming here more often. They are becoming comfortable in the area. They are coming here more often."

BUDGE, who has written license numbers down of cars whose drivers have been acting suspiciously.

"Right now I'm going to be pretty sensitive about that," Budge adds. "All of us need to be a little more careful about what we see. We should make note of tangible kinds of things."

"It is going to take a concerted effort on the part of a lot of people before this is going to get turned off. I've been here five years and I never ever thought of something like those murders happening in this area," he said.

The principal says he's often met people while looking for just walking on the beach.

Last night when he was taking his usual walk, Budge says, "I got a little kind" of young people.

Deaths cast cold shadows of dread

There is a chill of fear in the air over the safety of young women in this state.

Last week, two more were found murdered. The girls, both from Vashon Island, had been stabbed to death.

There have been 16 other young women who have been murdered or have disappeared in the state since December, 1973. Authorities say they have no suspects in most of the cases.

This makes people feel helpless. It makes them suspect someone whose only crime may be a loud mouth.

Recently, a woman called a reporter concerning "Ted," the prime suspect in the slayings of six young women and an unidentified person.

THE WOMAN was terribly nervous. She said she was quite sure a University of Washington student her college daughter had dated was "Ted."

Her proof was that the daughter said that on dates the young man continually talked about sex.

"He talks about sex with other girls he dates, too," the woman said. "It's all over my daughter's sorority that he is a sex fiend."

The reporter referred the woman to King County police, who so far have received tips on more than 2,300 "Ted" suspects. Some 90 per cent of the tips have proved groundless, police say, with only 10 per cent showing some value.

The fear shows up in other ways, too.

Nowadays, when people run across bones in the woods, they think the worst.

Dr. Patrick Besant-Matthews, King County medical examiner, recalled that recently someone brought in teeth he had found in the woods. The person thought the teeth looked like they had fillings and thus assumed they were human.

"The teeth turned out to be goat's teeth," said Dr. Besant-Matthews. "The goat must have eaten a cigarette package and gotten tin foil stuck in its teeth."

IN ANOTHER case, a woman called Seattle police to report her dog had brought home what appeared to be bone from a human hand.

Dr. Besant-Matthews took one look at the bone and quickly dismissed the report.

"It was obviously nonhuman," he said. "But I can see how to a beginner it looked sort of plausible."

He said most bones found and reported to police are nothing but "soup bones." The medical examiner said he expected more findings of nonhuman bones because "the gardening season has begun."

At the King County police crime lab, Kay Sweeney, supervisor, said the killings of the young women have resulted in citizens turning in "thousands of bones . . . so far, none have been human."

The fear of an unknown killer even affects simple pleasures, like going to a movie.

Last week, at a movie theater, a group of people were waiting in the lobby to see a film comedy. Couples were chatting amiably and drinking the free coffee provided by the management.

Then walked in a man who was disheveled in appearance.

"Did you hear two more girls got killed?" he announced to everyone.

"From the sounds of it, it sure looked like a professional job!"

He tried to converse with the other patrons, but no one talked back. The atmosphere in the lobby turned to ice-people felt uneasy. A few thought about calling

by Erik Lacitis

police.

But they didn't. What could they report? That some kook was trying to make grisly conversation?

THIS SENSE of fear is also extending even to those, such as one 27-year-old Seattle woman, who normally would trust strangers.

Up until last weekend, she hitchhiked frequently.

But that changed after an incident Sunday, when she accepted a ride from a man and he attempted to rape her.

The woman escaped by turning to her religion and starting this Buddhist chant:

"Nam-myoho-enge-kyo!" For five minutes she chanted while the man told her to shut up.

Finally, the man became so disgusted he told the woman to get out of the car.

"I chant for everything. It's my religious philosophy and I believe it works," the woman later said.

But the woman said that "I'll never hitchhike again."

The woman said she was lucky last Sunday.

Now, she, like so many others, is afraid.

Not-guilty plea given in Moclips case

Special to The Times

MONTESSANO, Grays Harbor County — William C. Batten, 28, charged with murder in the stabbing deaths of two Vashon Island women, pleaded not guilty today.

Batten was arraigned before Superior Court Judge John Schummacher who ordered the courtroom closed to the press and public. The proceedings took about 45 minutes, and afterward Batten was returned to the county jail here where he is held in lieu of $200,000 bail.

The bodies of Tina Lynn Jacobsen, 19, and Gaelisa (Gael) Burton, 18, were found in a make-shift shelter on a driftwood-strewn beach just north of Moclips April 18.

An autopsy showed that they had died of stab wounds to the neck. It also showed that they had not been raped.

Batten, a Moclips shake-mill worker, was arrested Saturday afternoon on a warrant charging him with two counts of first-degree murder.

Grays Harbor County Sheriff Harold Sumpter said Batten was arrested "at a location other than his residence" and offered no resistance. He is being held in the county jail in Montesano.

Miss Jacobsen and Miss Burton left Vashon Island on April 21, hitchhiking with plans to camp on the ocean beach. They were last seen alive in Moclips at 4:30 p.m. on the following day, presumably heading for the beach where their bodies were found three days later. Sumpter said yesterday that his department is not seeking other suspects in the case.

And, he added, there is nothing to connect Batten with the murders and disappearances of other young women in Washington State. Neither in appearance nor manner does the suspect resemble "Ted," the mystery man sought in connection with the fate of other women, Sumpter said.

Arrest may be near in Moclips murders

By PAUL HENDERSON
Times Staff Reporter

MOCLIPS, Grays Harbor County—A prime suspect in the murders of two Vashon Island women last week is under surveillance here and arrest may be imminent, The Times learned yesterday.

The suspect reportedly spent time at Western State Hospital as a sexual offender.

He is being investigated in the stabbing deaths of Tina Lynn Jacobsen, 15, and Gaelisa (Gael) Burton, 18, who were found on their sleeping bags in a driftwood shelter last Friday.

Asked to comment on the investigation, Grays Harbor County Sheriff Harold Sumpter said:

"I can't lie to you. We have a suspect and I hope to have an arrest soon."

The bodies, discovered at 4:30 p. m. last Friday by a beachcombing couple, were clad only in shirts. They were in a make-shift beach shelter just north of Moclips and about 200 feet inside the Quinault Indian Reservation.

An autopsy determined that they had not been raped. Perplexing to authorities is the fact that the shelter, which provided kneeling room only, showed no signs of any struggle.

The victims' hands had been bound with heavy twine.

"Everything seemed to be in order," Sumpter said. "It was as though they were just getting ready to bed down. Their hiking boots were turned upside down to keep the moisture out, apparently, and their packs had not been opened."

Could one person have murdered two healthy young women without leaving any sign of a struggle? Possibly, Sumpter said, if the victims had been trapped inside their "mummy"-type sleeping bags when the killer entered the tiny shelter.

"All he would have to do is lie on top of them," the sheriff speculated. "They couldn't move. They were at his mercy."

The victims left Vashon Island Monday of last week on a hitchhiking trip. They had planned to hike and camp on the ocean shore. Sumpter said they were seen alive in Moclips at 4:30 p. m. the next day, heading, presumably, for the beach.

Sumpter believes the women were murdered that night.

Asked if he feels that the murders may be connected to the deaths and disappearances of other young women in Western Washington, Sumpter said:

"The only similarity that I'm aware of is that the victims have all been young women."

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is cooperating in the investigation because the murders occurred on federal land. But John Siemers, investigator for the Bureau of Indian Affairs, said a provision of the United States Criminal Code would take the case out of federal jurisdiction if the murders were committed by a non-Indian. The suspect is described as white.

This isn't the first time Schulz has taken advantage of a kid like that, either. When was the last time you saw Pippin or Frieda or Violet?

"Pippin was no good unless there was a joke about him being dirty," Schulz tried to explain. "And all Frieda had was naturally curly hair. How long can you keep drawing jokes about somebody with naturally curly hair?"

Well, Charlie, to quote Dear Abby, "Who raised these kids anyway?"

And what about the little red-haired girl that Charlie Brown used to love from afar? Schulz deliberately wrote her out of the strip just to break the little guy's heart.

"I sold out on that one," he admitted. "I wish I had her back."

No evidence to support occult-murder theory

By JOHN WILSON

Police Capt. Herb Swindler said today it is possible someone involved in the occult is the murderer of a number of young women in this state but there is no evidence to back up such a theory.

Swindler, in charge of the Police Department's homicide and robbery section, said the King County police asked him to look into the murders from the view that the occult was involved.

County police, who are in charge of the investigation, are pursuing it from "the other side," Swindler said. The other side is that the murderer is a sexual psychopath.

"As of right now, right today, we don't have any concrete evidence of anything," Swindler said. "Nobody knows what happened to those girls.

"We're still pursuing the occult. It's a possibility. It doesn't appear to be the standard sexual psychopath. There's no reason for the bodies to be taken and dumped in one area."

SWINDLER SAID he has no idea how the sheriff of Sonoma County, Calif., developed a theory that one person — possibly the notorious California "Zodiac" killer — may have killed numerous women in five Western states.

At a press conference today, Sheriff Don Striepeke said he was not saying one person committed all the murders, just that it was a possibility. He offered no evidence to support such a theory.

Swindler said "Zodiac" is the only known occult killer in the country.

The captain said there are many practitioners of the occult in the United States.

"You have a lot of it going on across the country now and quite a lot of it going on here," he said.

"We know of certain individuals who are into this very deep. But there's no guarantee they're involved in human sacrifices."

Swindler discounted a report by a woman in Florida that her daughter, who had attended the University of Washington, has information about the murderer.

SWINDLER SAID he has received letters from the woman and has talked to her on the telephone.

"I told her she had better stop making all these wild allegations," Swindler said.

The woman's daughter "flipped out" and a friend removed her from school and took her back East, Swindler said. He said the mother was making statements without any evidence to support them.

The partial remains of six young women and an unidentified seventh person have been found at two sites east of Seattle.

The Forest Service today announced that it is closing off parts of Mount Baker to the public because of increased danger of avalanches caused by the mountain's unusual heat activity, the Geological Survey.

The closures were made on the recommendation of the Geological Survey, which warned that debris could flow from the Sherman Crater area.

Don R. Campbell, supervisor of the Mount Baker-Snoqualmie National Forest, said the closure includes Sherman Crater (called Summit Crater on some maps), Boulder Glacier below the crater, the Boulder Creek drainage and the 12-site Boulder Camp.

Coastal rumor mills hum over murders

By PAUL HENDERSON
Times Staff Reporter

MOCLIPS, Grays Harbor County — Two young women were found stabbed to death on the beach just north of here last Friday and just about everyone from Ocean Shores to Taholah has a rumor to share.

A woman in Ocean Shores has heard that the killer is someone called "Ted." A man in Pacific Beach wants to know if it is true that there were three bodies instead of two.

And a shake-mill owner in Moclips says he knows the suspect in the case by name.

"What this man has heard may turn out to be the truth."

In a Moclips tavern, the mill owner talked quietly with a suspect under surveillance by the Grays Harbor County Sheriff's Office. He described the suspect as

"burned-out hippie."

CONFIRMING THAT there is a suspect in the murders of Tina Lynn Jacobsen, 19, and Guelisa (Gael) Burton, 18, both of Vashon Island, Grays Harbor County Sheriff Harold Sumpter said yesterday that the man under surveillance, indeed, has no place to go. "We're watching him very closely," Sumpter said. "The man is holding down a job, and if he leaves I'll know about it immediately."

The ocean-front stretch of Highway 109 is dotted with communities. The highway ends to the north in Taholah. And from Moclips—eight miles to the south—there is only one main road out.

Sumpter, former chief criminal deputy for the sheriff's office, said the anticipated arrest is pending laboratory analysis of evidence. Moclips residents said that a search warrant was served on the suspect's home.

The partly clothed victims were found lying face down. They had been stabbed repeatedly in the neck. Miss Jacobsen also had been stabbed in the back.

Sumpter said the women's clothing was wet, indicating that they may have undressed to crawl into their sleeping bags in the driftwood shelter.

Yet, the sheriff said he is not entirely convinced that the murders actually occurred in the shelter. There were no indications in the sand of bodies being dragged into the shelter, he said, but a heavy rain could have erased such evidence.

What, he was asked, is a "burned-out hippie?"

"Someone heavy on drugs," he replied. "Someone with a far-away look in his eyes and no place to go."

Police here discount 'Zodiac' theory for women's deaths

By LOU CORSALETTI

The phenomenon of murdered and vanished young women and girls is not limited to Washington State, it was emphasized at a press conference yesterday called by the sheriff of Sonoma County, Calif.

Sheriff Don Striepeke expounded the theory that San Francisco's so-called Zodiac killer may be responsible for nearly all the cases in Western States. He said a $10,000 reward, privately donated, would be paid for information.

Striepeke believes the killer is involved in witchcraft and may be seeking "slaves to accompany him in an afterlife." He said the killer selects his victims carefully, interviewing them to determine if they will serve his purpose.

Law-enforcement officials here say there is no evidence to support Striepeke's theory of cultist or witchcraft ties to the Washington killings, but they and their colleagues in other Western states share his frustrations in trying to track the killer.

Janice Ott, Denise Naslund, Lynda Ann Healy, Susan Rancourt — the names of local victims are well known here.

Striepeke said his theory is backed by California's Criminal Investigation and Identification Division. That agency is certain that 14 California murders between December, 1969, and December 1973, were committed by the same person.

SONOMA COUNTY experienced its series of murders in 1972 and 1973. They included:

February 4, 1972, Maureen Stanley, 12, and Yvonne Weber, 13, vanished from a Santa Rosa skating rink, their remains found together in December, cause of death not determined; March 3, 1972, Kim Wendy Allen, 19, a Santa Rosa Junior College co-ed was hitchhiking, body found the following day, died from strangulation;

April 3, 1972, Jeanette Kamahale, 20, another Santa Rosa College co-ed vanished, was hitchhiking, no trace found; Lori Ann Kurasa, 13, a reported runaway last seen November 22, 1972, body found two weeks later, died from blow to back of head;

Carolyn Davis, 15, reported as a runaway and hitchhiking, body found July 28, 1973, within 5 feet of where the first two victims were discovered, died from strychnine poisoning about 10 days earlier; and Theresa Anne Walsh, 23, formerly of Seattle, vanished while hitchhiking, body found in a stream December 28, 1973, died from strangulation;

In January, 1974, young women from the Seattle area and other parts of Washington began to disappear. The incidents continued through July 14, 1974.

By March of this year, six bodies, including that of a University of Oregon co-ed, were found in wooded areas east of Seattle.

Two young women, both co-eds, still are missing.

SINCE LAST JULY the trail of dead and missing girls has continued into other states:

Utah — August 24, 1974, Laura Ann Aime, 17, of Salem, disappeared, said to have been living in a hippie commune 30 miles south of Salt Lake City, nude body found November 27, strangled with stocking; Nancy Wilcox, 18, of Salt Lake County, left home October 2, 1974, no trace of her since;

Melissa Smith, 17, daughter of Midvale police chief, left pizza parlor on October 18, 1974, to go home, nude body found on October 27 in remote wooden area, she had been strangled with her own stocking; Deborah Kent, 17, left home in Bountiful November 8 to pick up her brother at skating rink, has not been seen since.

New Mexico — December 2, 1974, nude body of an unidentified 18 to 22-year-old female found in brushy secluded area near Santa Fe, died from strangulation about three days earlier.

Colorado — January 13, 1975, Karen Campbell, a 23-year-old Dearborn, Mich., nurse, vanished from an Aspen-area ski lodge, nude body found five weeks later in desolate area, died from blow to head; March 15, Julie Cunningham, 28, vanished from her Vail apartment, has not been seen since.

In Mesa County, Colo., near Grand Junction, the nude body of Sandra Jean Weaver, 19, of Salt Lake City, was found near a river on July 2, 1974, she died from strangulation the previous day.

And Barbara Jean Rocky, 22, a Brigham Young University co-ed from Menlo Park, Calif., was shot six times and sexually assaulted on March 11, 1973. Her nude body was found in a canyon east of Salt Lake City.

Police found paperback books and other occult-related paraphernalia in her apartment.

STRIEPEKE SAID there are marked similarities among the California victims—all found nude or partially clothed; all similar in appearance; all small to medium in height, most had long hair, usually parted in the middle, and all had pierced ears.

Victims in other states had the same general characteristics.

Here, the victims were medium in height, all had long hair, generally parted in the middle, no trace of clothing was found with the skeletal remains, and all but two had pierced ears.

It is not known how the women here died, but in California and other states deaths were caused by strangulation, blows to the head, shooting and in one case, poisoning.

Islanders in shock over murders

By ERIK LACITIS
Times Staff Reporter

VASHON ISLAND — Herold Jacobsen yesterday tried to talk about his murdered 19-year-old daughter.

"What can I say . . . she was the world's greatest little girl," he said.

Then he looked at his wife, who was crying nearby.

"Oh, God . . ." His voice trailed off in despair.

The stabbing deaths of Tina Lynn Jacobsen, and Gaelisa (Gael) Burton, 16, who were found dead late Friday on a Pacific Ocean beach near Moclips, Grays Harbor County, have shocked this island community.

Both girls graduated from Vashon Island High School last year. Tina shared a house with friends and Gael lived on a farm.

Gael had been warned by friends not to go on a hitchhiking and hiking trip to the ocean.

"I told her last Sunday it seemed a little dangerous," said Mrs. Nancy Neff. "But when you're born and raised on Vashon Island you're not even aware of what is out there."

"The kids here think the world out there is great and beautiful and mellow."

Nancy and Larry Neffs are a young couple who live on a 16-acre homestead on the island. Gael had been working with them to start a moccasins business.

On Fridays, Gael would take the moccasins to the Pike Place Market and offer them for sale.

"She was such a gentle person. She was totally vegetarian and totally against violence. I don't think she understood it was a very violent world," Neff said.

Neff said Gael had taken moccasins with her on the hiking trip so she could finish work on them.

Mrs. Neff said Gael told her "not to worry because she was going with another girl."

The bodies of the two girls were found partly clothed and bore stab wounds. The hands of the two young women had been tied behind them, authorities said.

Tina Jacobsen worked at Virginia Mason Hospital as a dietary aide.

After graduating from high school last year, she and a group of other girls went to Idaho "to make an attempt at homesteading," one of her former teachers said.

island, said Vashon's "semi-remote location is conducive to the young people not being afraid of traveling alone or hitchhiking . . . we haven't had any homicides for a number of years and have had extremely few sex-related incidents."

The two girls left on the hiking trip last Monday. Tina was scheduled to work at Virginia Mason Hospital at 11 a.m. Thursday.

The next day, on Friday, worried friends called authorities.

The bodies of the two girls were found in a makeshift driftwood shelter on the beach about 200 feet inside the south boundary of the Quinault Indian Reservation, a mile north of Moclips.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has joined the investigation because the bodies were found on the Indian reservation.

Authorities have refused to speculate whether the stabbing deaths of Tina and Gael bear any similarities to the murders and disappearances of nine other young women in the state since January, 1974.

Grays Harbor County coroner Blaine Jex said an autopsy showed the women had been dead at least 48 hours before their bodies were discovered. He said it will not be known until tests are complete in a few days whether the women, clad only in sweatshirts, had been sexually assaulted.

Jex said authorities are "quite sure" the women were killed by stabbing with a knife or other similar weapon.

Word of the murders spread quickly through the small community of Vashon Island, where the parents of both girls live.

Many couldn't believe women from their isolated community had been killed in the manner they had read about in newspapers.

One friend of Gael said in controlled anger about whoever stabbed the two girls:

"Why are there creeps like this running around? Why . . .?"

2nd meeting set by kin of missing

Chris Silva, parole officer, will speak at the second public meeting of the Committee of Families and Friends of Missing Persons.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Holy Family Parish School Hall, 20th Avenue Southwest and Southwest Roxbury Street.

The committee was formed by Mrs. Kenneth Linstad, mother of Mrs. Vonnie Stuth, who disappeared from her White Center home November 27.

Killers Who Slip Through the Net

The case of the nine women who vanished last year has become the biggest mystery of its kind in the Northwest. The attention of the public and the news media has been riveted on the fate of the missing women and on the identity of the elusive "Ted," the prime suspect in the slayings. The Seattle

BY PAUL BOYD

It was a typical night at Leo's Ramble Inn Tavern, one of the many watering holes that ring the south end of Seattle like a string of dirty pearls, when Darrell Erickson dropped in for a beer.

He sat down on a stool and soon struck up a conversation with a man sitting nearby. The man was a stranger to the Ramble Inn, the regulars said, but the two talked as if they knew each other.

Like Erickson, his companion was in his 50s. He wore a short nylon jacket and light-colored pants. Customers later described him as "debonair." Their conversation was casual and lasted nearly half an hour.

At 11:30, the placed beer drinking gave way to a nightmarish series of events.

Someone exploded five loud firecrackers inside the tavern.

The loud noise seemed to trigger the stranger, who stood up and fired three shots into Erickson's body with a .25 caliber automatic.

Erickson sat on the stool without saying anything for almost two minutes. Then, he stood up, and fell to the floor, dying. By the time he hit the ground, his assailant was out the door and was never seen again.

Darrell Erickson died at Harborview Medical Center a few hours later. The date was May 5, 1974, and his senseless and bizarre murder added a new name to the "open" homicide file of the Seattle Police Department.

There were 55 people murdered within the Seattle city limits in 1974, one more than the year before. Police solved 45 of those crimes. But the unsolved murders irritate like sand in an oyster. Instead of forming pearls, however, they create ghosts that constantly nag at homicide detectives.

"A dead man on the floor tells you something," said Lt. Pat Murphy, who is in charge of the police department's three sergeants and 13 detectives in the homicide unit.

"He's saying that somebody killed him," Murphy continued. "Go out and find who did it. A homicide investigator knows he's the only guy that can answer that plea."

As most amateur criminologists know, murder is generally a crime of passion, a lethal mixture of sex and violence. That fact helps to explain why so many homicides are solved, because the murderer is generally known by the victim and easily identified.

The first 24 hours after the death are the most important for solving the case, said Murphy.

"Most suspects leave some part of themselves at the scene, and take part of the scene with them," he said.

After a killing, detectives make a thorough investigation of the homicide area, go door to door looking for witnesses, and get all evidence back to the forensic lab for analysis.

The next step is the laborious process, often taking up to a week, of interviewing all witnesses and neighbors, relatives and friends.

The 80 per cent clearance rate proves that these tried and true methods work. But not always. Ten times last year homicide detectives came up empty handed. Three of those cases — Heidi Peterson, Georgann Hawkins and Lynda Ann Healy — provided a lot of unwanted publicity for the Crimes Against Persons Unit.

Four-year-old Heidi Peterson disappeared Feb. 21, 1974, as she was playing in the front yard of her home at 2622-10th Ave. E. A massive search failed to turn up the little girl. Almost a year later, her bones were found accidentally by two park employees who were reclaiming a garbage can thrown over a bush-covered hillside not two blocks from Heidi's home.

Lynda Ann Healy, 21, a senior at the University of Washington, was last reported seen on the night of Jan. 31 in a house she shared with four other women at 3517-12th Ave. NE. The bed in her basement room was empty the next morning. There were blood spots on the pillow. No sound was heard in the night.

Police Department, however, has other unsolved homicides in its files, cases that never received the publicity or the man-hours devoted to the more sensational crimes. In this article, reporter Paul Boyd takes a look at Seattle's "other" murders in 1974.

Georgann Hawkins, 18, a University of Washington freshman, was last reported seen at 1 a.m. June 11 as she walked south in a well-lighted alley toward the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority house at 4521-17th Ave. NE. It was less than 100 yards from her destination. She vanished somewhere short of it.

The skeletal remains of Ms. Healy were found along with those of three other women on a wooded hillside near the Taylor Mountain region last month. The case of the missing women, including the two who vanished in Seattle, has been taken over by a combined city-county task force, working out of the King County Courthouse.

The creation of the 11-man task force has enabled Seattle homicide detectives to concentrate on their "regular" caseload, which includes seven other unsolved murders in 1974.

In addition to the Erickson file, the unsolved murders are those of:

— Robert Emmett, 44, also known as Robert Roberts, who was found Nov. 26th in his home at 5750-28th Ave. NE with a pillowcase over his head and a .38 caliber bullet wound in his back. Police were directed to the scene by an anonymous caller who said a body would be found at the house.

Homicide detectives believe Emmett's "execution-style" killing was drug-related.

— John O. Vincent, 60, found dead on the living room floor of his home at 4010-17th Ave. SW last Nov. 26, after he failed to appear for a dinner engagement with his sister. Someone had crushed Vincent's skull with a heavy typewriter.

As with Darrell Erickson, detectives have been unable to find any motive for Vincent's death.

— Two 18-year-old men, Granderson Johnson and Edward Nachor, Jr., who were shot to death in the hallway of a Capitol Hill apartment July 23. Johnson was an escapee from a Virginia jail, where he had been sentenced for breaking and entering and assault. He escaped April 23, 1973, when two men knocked on the jail door, pulled a gun on the jailer and demanded Johnson's release. Nachor, the escapee's companion, was a parolee from a California prison.

According to police files, Johnson and Nachor were armed with a sawed-off shotgun and a revolver when they tried to rob one of the apartment's residents of drugs or money. The tables were turned, however, and the two were gunned down with a .38 caliber revolver.

"Nobody would admit who was robbed," Murphy said, explaining why the case has not been solved. "A lot of people involved in the drug traffic are afraid to come forward or are mixed up in it themselves. But this was obviously a drug rip-off."

— Leon Jackson, who was found face down on a double bed in his room at 7019-30th SW on February 9, 1974. He had been beaten to death with a blunt instrument. Police say they know the motive for the killing and have a pretty good idea who did it, but the witnesses won't come forward. Without enough evidence, their hands are tied.

— Tomas Madali, a retired 70-year-old, who was spending a quiet night in her fourth-floor apartment in south Seattle last Dec. 6, when someone kicked in her door and beat her to death.

The detectives are reluctant to talk about the Madali case. They say they know the motive and are an "inch" from solving the murder.

The seven homicide files are still on the active list. In fact, no unsolved homicide is ever considered a "closed" case. Detectives recently cracked a two-year-old case.

"To a true homicide investigator, an unsolved homicide is like a blow to his professional pride," said Murphy. "That's why we never close a homicide. You never know what's going to crop up."

No Suspects in 2 Women's Deaths

BY RICHARD HARDESTY

The FBI continued searching yesterday for clues to the murders of two young Vashon Island women whose bodies were found Friday in a driftwood beach shelter near Moclips in Grays Harbor County.

"There are no suspects," said an FBI agent in Seattle.

The victims, Tina Jacobsen, 19, and Gaelisa (Gael) Burton, 18, were on what was to have been a three-day vacation from work — "a kind of meditation retreat," as one of Gaelisa's friends described it.

They hitchhiked from Vashon Island on Monday, and were to have returned home by Thursday.

The Grays Harbor County coroner, Blaine Jex, said the autopsy showed that the women died Tuesday or Wednesday. He added that he wouldn't know until later this week whether they had been sexually assaulted.

"This is not a crime which is likely to produce a suspect anytime soon," another county official said.

The FBI has taken control of the case because the women's bodies were found just inside the Quinault Indian Reservation, a federal jurisdiction.

Memorial services for Ms. Jacobsen will be held at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow in the sanctuary of the Vashon Island Episcopal Church.

Gael and Tina graduated from Vashon Island

High School last year, and Gael had been living by herself on an old 20-acre homestead farm.

She worked for a time last year as an X-ray librarian for Virginia Mason Hospital, but gave that up in favor of helping Larry and Nancy Neff with their leather-goods shop on the island.

Tina was a dietary aide at Virginia Mason and stayed occasionally with Gael.

Tina's parents would not comment on her death. "Gael was practically a full partner in the moccasins and leather shirt company," said Neff, who lives on a small farmstead about 2 miles from where Gael lived.

"She was taking a break before the summer business rush. She even took moccasins with her to sew while she was there. She was a free person. She knew what she wanted. She was mature, and intelligent, and very responsible.

"Gael was also a vegetarian, and she believed in complete nonviolence towards all people, both in action and in thought."

Neff said that Gael had grown up on Vashon and had not had that much to do with the outside world. She was naive in that respect. He added, "Both I and my wife had counseled her about going outside the island, about taking precautions, but she was always stubborn about what she wanted to do. She felt she could always take care of herself, and that taking Tina along was sufficient protection.

"The irony of it is that when I heard the news flash on television about the two bodies, I knew right away what was going on. So I called the FBI and they confirmed it.

"Then, my wife and I were trying to get over the shock and had the TV going, and I had to get up twice and turn the damned channel because the only thing being shown were programs about goons chasing girls down dark streets and into alleys.

"People sit around and read the newspapers and get shocked by violence and death, and then they watch it for entertainment on TV.

"Gael was dead set against all that kind of pandering to violence. But this is a violent society, and some of the people who are mentally disturbed and living in fantasy worlds could be caused by the kinds of things shown on TV. There are a helluva lot of these people running around loose right now.

"The tragedy is that Gael and Tina were flowers, just starting to bloom. It was a real crime.

"Knowing Gael, I suspect they were done in by somebody who stumbled across them while on the beach. She said before they left that they weren't going to have anything to do with anybody around there.

"I wish she'd known something like karate, though. She might have been able to turn the tables."

2 Vashon women killed on beach

Two young women found stabbed to death yesterday on a Pacific Ocean beach near Moclips, Grays Harbor County, were identified today by their parents as Tina Jacobsen, 19, and Gaelisa Burton, 18, both of Vashon Island.

Blaine Jex, county coroner, announced the identification.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has entered the case because the bodies reportedly were found on the Quinault Indian Reservation. There was some doubt, however, that the victims were found on Indian land.

Curtis Jan Hunen, Grays Harbor prosecuting attorney, said the bodies, found in a makeshift driftwood camp were 200 feet inside the south boundary of the reservation.

The women had been reported missing on a hitchhiking and beach-camping trip.

The bodies were partly disrobed. An autopsy was being held in Aberdeen.

The F. B. I. and Grays Harbor County officers declined to speculate whether the killings bore any similarity to King County's "Ted" murders.

Ms. Jacobsen was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Jacobsen, Vashon Island. Ms. Burton's parents are Mr. and Mrs. George Burton, Burton, Vashon Island.

Man Pleads Innocent In Stabbing Case

MONTESANO, Grays Harbor County — A plea of innocent was entered yesterday in the case of William C. Batten, 28, charged last Saturday with the fatal stabbing of two Vashon Island women.

Batten's court-appointed lawyer, Robert L. Charette, of Aberdeen, withdrew yesterday after the attorney's law partner, Tom Brown, told Superior Court Judge John W. Schumacher that Charette would be serving in the State Legislature until May.

The judge then appointed a new attorney, James Solen, also of Aberdeen.

The bodies of Tina Jacobsen, 19, and Gaelisa (Gael) Burton, 18, were found April 18 on an ocean beach near Moclips, their hands tied behind their backs. They had been stabbed several times, but had not been sexually assaulted.

The two had hitchhiked from Vashon Island to the beach April 14 on a three-day vacation.

The judge yesterday denied bail on the two counts of first-degree murder against Batten, and scheduled a May 23 court hearing when the prosecuting and defense attorneys will present evidence to be entered during the trial. No trial date has been set.

A State Ends Mandatory PE

SACRAMENTO — (UPI) — The California Assembly yesterday approved a Senate-passed bill ending mandatory physical-education classes in the last two years of high school. Opponents argued the bill would weaken physical training for young people.

Applications Deadline

Applications for the voluntary racial transfers in Seattle school district's middle school desegregation program will be accepted until May 16 at the Student Placement Office in the district's headquarters.

The applications are available at the middle schools. For parents needing more information about the transfer programs at Eckstein, Wilson and Hamilton, there will be a meeting at 7:30 p.m. May 13 at Madrona Middle School.

Another meeting for parents interested in Madrona programs will be held at 7:30 p.m. May 15 at Madrona.

The final date to apply for voluntary transfer is May 16. Schools that have already met their recruitment quotas by then will be exempt from "mandatory backup" assignments. Those assignments will be made during the week of May 19-23.

Free Life-saving Classes at Center

If cardio-pulmonary resuscitation is started on a heart attack victim within one minute of the attack, the chance of recovery is 98 per cent, according to current American Red Cross figures.

Free classes in the technique are being given at the Seattle Center Food Circus court this week by Medic I and Medic II personnel.

The schedule is tomorrow, 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.; Thursday, May 1, 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.; Friday, May 2, 10 a.m., and Saturday, May 3, 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Call 682-3100 to register for the classes which are sponsored by the Washington State Heart Association, Seattle Fire Department Medic II Program, Seattle Life Underwriters Association and KVI radio as "C.P.R. Week" in Seattle is observed.

Ban Lifted on School Paper

Distribution resumes today on a Spokane high school newspaper stopped Friday by an assistant principal who objected to the word "Midol" in a humorous story.

Midol is a pill to relieve menstrual discomfort.

Shadle Park High School principal Keith Rostvold, who was not in Spokane when the decision was made, said court decisions on student publications and the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution made it impossible to ban the newspaper.

He said the incident would lead to a review of school journalism but not to policies requiring prepublication review of newspaper contents.

Police discount 'Zodiac' killer link

Police officials in Seattle, Utah and Colorado have discounted a theory offered by a California sheriff that one man—possibly the Zodiac killer—has murdered as many as 40 women in five Western states.

Sheriff Don Striepeke of Sonoma County plans to tell newsmen tomorrow about his mass-murder theory which covers murders of women over the past 12 years.

Striepeke already has been quoted as saying a lone killer who believes in witchcraft may be responsible for unsolved slayings in San Francisco, Seattle, Utah, Colorado, New Mexico and Santa Rosa, Calif.

King County Police Capt. J. N. (Nick) Mackie said yesterday that at a meeting last month with policemen from several states and Canada, it was concluded that the murders here have no connection with the California or Canadian slayings.

A representative from Sonoma County attended the meeting, Mackie said.

COLORADO law-enforcement officials say they are unaware of any connection between California's Zodiac killer and the murder of a woman and the disappearance of another in Colorado, the United Press International reported.

Salt Lake County, Utah, authorities said they have no evidence to link Zodiac with the murder of two girls and the disappearance of another girl in Utah last year.

The California sheriff said the murderer responsible for the deaths would "make Juan Corona look like a piker," a reference to Corona's 1973 conviction for killing 25 migrant farmworkers in Northern California, the Associated Press reported.

STRIEPEKE said he believes the killer could be Zodiac, who once taunted San Francisco police with his confession notes. The last of those notes, mailed in January, 1974, claimed 37 victims, but police have credited the Zodiac with only six—the last one a cab driver slain in 1969.

Sonoma County Sheriff's Detective Sgt. Edwin Carlstedt said an ancient witchcraft symbol of two linked rectangles formed with twigs and rocks was found at a remote site where three of six victims were dumped in Santa Rosa in 1972 and 1973.

Carlstedt said the symbol means "to carry the souls away, to take them into Paradise."

Striepeke said the killer may have believed that his victims would become his slaves after they died.

Carlstedt said during the investigation of the six deaths he found striking similarities in the murders of 28 Northern California women between the ages of 18 and 24, beginning with the 1963 murder of Judith Williamson in Albany, a San Francisco suburb.

He said further investigation left "no doubt" that the same person who committed the six Sonoma County murders also killed 10 young women who vanished in the Seattle area during 1974.

Other deaths of young women in Salt Lake City, Utah, Grand Junction and Aspen, Colo., and Santa Fe, N. M., also may be related, Carlstedt said.

He said all the victims on his list were found nude, except for occasional items of jewelry, and their clothing and belongings were never found. He said all were killed in one place and their bodies dumped in another—often in remote areas where they appeared to have been thrown from the roadside.

Carlstedt said the killer may be choosing his murder sites to trace out a giant "Z" across the Western United States.

MACKIE, discounting the connection with the California murders and the murders of six young women whose bodies were found east of Seattle and who are believed to be the victims of a suspect known as Ted, said:

"One element in our cases does not exist in the California cases is that our 'Ted' suspect never has picked up hitchhikers to our knowledge. And no clothing or jewelry have been found with the remains here."

"Ted" is the prime suspect in the deaths here. He is a mysterious young man seen with one of the women before she vanished last July. Her remains were found with those of another young woman and the remains of a third as-yet unidentified person. The remains of four other young women, including one from Oregon, who vanished mysteriously, were found earlier this year.

Mackie also stressed there is no evidence of connection between the witchcraft activities and the deaths here.

2 Slain Women Named

P-I Staff, AP, UPI

Two young women who were found stabbed to death in a driftwood camp shelter on an ocean beach near Moclips were identified by their parents yesterday as Tina Lynn Jacobsen, 19, and Gaelisa Burton, 18, both of Vashon Island.

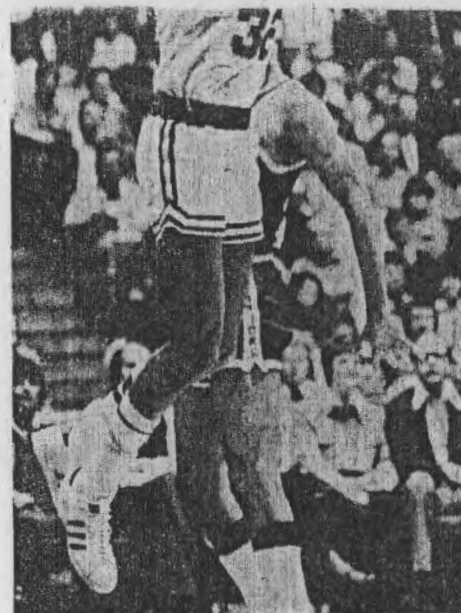

The bodies were discovered Friday by an unidentified Seattle couple who stopped to examine the shelter during a stroll along the beach. The shelter was just within the Quinault Indian Reservation and not far from the Moclips River.

Grays Harbor County prosecutor Curtis Janhunen said the women were unclothed except for sweatshirts and each had been stabbed "several times." Their hands were tied.

Ms. Jacobsen was a dietary aide at Virginia Mason Hospital, where Ms. Burton worked as an X-ray librarian.

King County police said the women had hitchhiked from Vashon Island to the ocean Monday. Their roommate reported them missing on Friday, the day the bodies were discovered.

The FBI said last night a representative of the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs had surveyed the area where the bodies were found and determined it was within the reservation. The case is therefore within the FBI's jurisdiction. The FBI refused to reveal any information about the case yesterday.

Grays Harbor County coroner Blaine Jex said the women apparently died of stab wounds, but he said a final decision awaited completion of autopsies.

FBI agents and Grays Harbor County sheriff's deputies refused to speculate whether the deaths bore any similarity to a rash of murders and disappearances involving nine other young women in Washington State since Jan. 31, 1974. In recent months partial remains of five other women had been found.

Tina Jacobsen was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Jacobsen of the Cedarhurst area of Vashon Island, and Gaelisa Burton was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Burton, of Burton on Vashon Island.

When contacted yesterday, the Burton girl's father said:

"I have but one thing to say. The death penalty in this state should be reinstated and made mandatory."

Reports on slain women filter in Grays Harbor County Sheriff Harold Sumpter said today his office has received reports from persons who may have seen two Vashon Island women hiking or hitchhiking in the Aberdeen-Hoquiam area before they were found stabbed to death Friday on a Pacific Ocean beach.

Sumpter said one person reported seeing two young women and a male with hiking equipment near the Hoquiam area. But the sheriff said the witness wasn't sure what day he saw them.

"It's nothing unusual for a couple of girls to be backpacking in the area. We're trying to nail down for sure that the reports are of these girls," Sumpter said.

The victims were Tina Lynn Jacobsen, 19, and Gaelisa (Gael) Burton, 18. Their bodies, clad only in sweatshirts, bore stab wounds.

They were found on the beach at Moclips just 200 feet inside the Quinault Indian Reservation.

Francis McCrory, chairman of the Quinault fish and game commission, said of the murderer: "It had to be a stranger."

He expressed "shock and outrage" over the killings, noting that there has not been a murder on the Quinault Reservation in recent history.

"We just don't have those kind of people here," he said. "Our people don't believe in murder."

A spokesman for the Quinault Reservation said the girls had not applied for a permit to be on the tribe's beach. The reservation beaches are normally closed to non-Indians.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has entered the case because the bodies were on federal land. Agents are being assisted by investigators from the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the three-man Quinault police force.

John Siemers, criminal investigator for the Bureau of Indian Affairs, said today there are no suspects. The area where the bodies were found has been sealed off, he said.

"We've combed that place with a fine-tooth comb," Siemers said.

So far, no Moclips resident has come forward who remembers seeing the girls in the small town.

Workers at the Surf Edge, the town's only grocery, said today they don't remember seeing the girls. The shelter in which the girls were found is about three blocks from the store.

The victims left Vashon Island Monday, hitchhiking, with plans to hike and camp along the ocean. Their bodies were found in a makeshift driftwood shelter. Blaine Jex, Grays Harbor County coroner, said the women died Tuesday or Wednesday.

Results of tests to determine whether the victims were sexually assaulted are pending.

The young women graduated from Vashon Island High School last year. Tina shared a house with friends and Gael lived by herself on a farm.

The Vashon Island community received news nearly two weeks ago that another young woman who grew up there had been killed.

She was Candace Condon, 22, who was found dead April 9 in her hotel room in Nome.

Authorities have charged Brent Allen Thompson, 24, of Seattle, with first-degree murder and arson in the death of Miss Condon. A Seattle friend of Miss Condon and Thompson said he understood the two had planned to be married.

Dismembered

Body found near Salem

SALEM, Ore. — (UPI) — Sheriff's deputies are trying to determine whether the murders of several women in Washington State are related to the weekend slaying of Betty Lucille Wilson, whose dismembered body was found near a landfill.

The decapitated body of the 37-year-old Scio, Ore. woman was discovered by a fisherman near the entrance to Brown's Island sanitary landfill Saturday.

Dr. William Brady, state medical examiner, said the woman died from strangulation or choking.

The sheriff's office issued a public plea for information from anyone who may have seen the stocky, dark-haired woman after she left a Salem restaurant.

District Attorney Gary Gortmaker said investigators so far had not found any connection between the slaying of the woman and the murders of a number of young women in Washington State. Those murders are believed to have been committed by a man named "Ted."

"It is a possibility we surely will be looking into, though," Gortmaker said.

The sheriff's office sent divers into the area where the woman's body was found, searching for additional clues.

No bail for suspect in girls' murder case

Special to The Times

MONTESANO, Grays Harbor County — William C. Batten, 28, charged with the stabbing deaths of two young Vashon Island women on the beach near Moclips, was being held without bail today after entering not-guilty pleas yesterday.

Batten, a shake-mill worker, was assigned a new attorney yesterday.

Superior Court Judge John Schumacher appointed James Solan to represent Batten after Robert L. Charette, the original appointee, withdrew because he is serving in the Legislature.

An evidentiary hearing, the next step in the case, is scheduled May 23.

Batten, arrested Saturday, had been held for $200,000 bail.

Bail authorization was canceled by Judge Schumacher, the usual step in first-degree murder cases.

Batten had been free on $3,500 bail pending sentencing after being convicted October 3 in Kitsap County Superior Court of three counts of second-degree assault of his children, Kitsap County Prosecutor John Merkel said today.

The charges stemmed from a police investigation begun last July after a day-care center reported Batten's children were bruised, Merkel said. The children are boys, 2 and 6, and a girl 3.

Sentencing had been scheduled for May 19 but that may now be changed, Merkel said.

The arraignment here yesterday was inadvertently closed to the press. The courtroom was cleared before the hearing so Batten and Tom Brown, Charette's law partner, could discuss the case.

Curt JanHunen, prosecutor, said no other rooms were available for the attorney-client discussion. Judge Schumacher entered the courtroom from his chambers as the discussion ended and immediately began the arraignment.

Court workers were not aware of the situation and reporters were kept waiting in the hallway outside. JanHunen said future hearings will be open.

Sheriff Theorizes On 'Zodiac' Killings

BY UPI, P-I STAFF

Sheriff Don Striespeke of Santa Rosa, Calif., said Friday a Zodiac-style killer he believes might have murdered up to 40 women while ranging over several Western states may "interview" his victims first to see if they should die.

"The killer selects his victims very carefully to see if they fit his criteria for life or death," the Sonoma County Sheriff told a news conference.

Striespeke denied he was advocating the theory that the killer, if it is the same one, was ranging over several states in a "Z" pattern beginning in California, touching in Seattle, then moving southeastward to Utah and Colorado, and possibly heading north from there.

"Speculation about the letter 'Z' doesn't come from our office," the sheriff said. Looking at it from another angle, it could also be the letter 'N' like in 'Nero.'"

Seattle and King County police have dismissed the sheriff's theories. Capt. Nick Mackie of the King County Police, who heads a special 11-man task force trying to solve the Washington murders, said:

"We have come to the conclusion that there was no connection between the California murders and the unsolved cases here."

Mackie said psychiatrists here have not been able to develop a psychological profile of "Ted," the prime suspect in the slayings, because there isn't enough evidence to create one.

2 Slain Girls 'Not Sexually Molested'

A preliminary autopsy report shows that two young women who were found stabbed to death Friday on a Pacific Ocean beach were not sexually assaulted, the Grays Harbor County Coroner said yesterday.

Coroner Blaine Jex said the preliminary report indicates "there is no evidence either one had been sexually molested."

The victims, Tina Jacobsen, 19, and Gaelisa (Gael) Burton, 18, were unclothed except for sweatshirts, and each had been stabbed several times. Their hands were tied.

Jex said stabbing appears to have been the cause of death. The final autopsy report will be ready tomorrow, he said.

The two Vashon Island women had hitchhiked to the ocean April 14. Their roommate reported them missing on Friday, the day the bodies were discovered. Jex said the women had been dead at least 48 hours.

The Grays Harbor County Sheriff's office is currently investigating reports from persons who may have seen the two women hiking or hitchhiking in the Aberdeen-Hoquiam area prior to the slaying.

Sheriff Harold S. ...

women hiking or hitchhiking in the Aberdeen-Hoquiam area prior to the slaying.

Sheriff Harold Sumpter said one person had seen two young women and a man with hiking equipment near the Hoquiam area, but the witness wasn't sure of the exact date.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) has entered the case because the bodies of the women were found on the beach at Moclips just 200 feet inside the Quinault Indian Reservation, a federal jurisdiction. FBI agents are being assisted by investigators from the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the three-man Quinault police force.

An FBI agent in Seattle said yesterday there are no suspects yet in the case.

Memorial services for Ms. Jacobsen will be held at 2:30 p.m. today at the Island Funeral Service Chapel on Vashon. Services for Ms. Burton will be held tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the Vashon Island Episcopal Church.

The two women were graduated last year by Vashon Island High School. Tina shared a house with friends and Gael lived by herself on a farm.

In another Pacific Northwest murder investigation, sheriff's deputies in Salem, Ore., were trying to determine yesterday whether the murders of several women in Washington State are related to the weekend slaying of Betty Lucille Wilson, whose dismembered body was found Saturday near Brown's Island sanitary landfill.

The state medical examiner said the woman died from strangulation or choking, and the sheriff's office has issued a public plea for information from anyone who may have seen the stocky, dark-haired woman after she left the Pepper Tree restaurant in Salem.

Sonics-Warriors in game 5: Hotly contested series resumes

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Golden State Warriors and Seattle SuperSonics play game five of their NBA playoff tonight but it may turn into round five instead.

The teams have split their first four games in a roughhouse series that has seen players from both sides almost come to blows on a number of occasions, especially in the vicinity of rival forwards Derrek Dickey of Golden State and Leonard Gray of Seattle.

Coaches Al Attles of the Warriors and Bill Russell of Seattle seem to think that cooler heads can prevail the rest of the way, however.

"The two teams are playing some hard basketball but it's not a thing where it gets to the point that they hate each other," said Attles.

Russell called it "a very competitive series, but it's to be expected in the playoffs."

Seattle won impressively 111-94 Saturday with Warrior star Rick Barry hitting only 3-of-14 shots, including a pair of easy layups. Fred Brown hit 13-of-26 shots in a super shooting show for the Sonics.

"It's like those first four games mean nothing," Barry said Monday. "All it is now is a three-game series."

"I am not happy the way we played Saturday," added Attles, "but you have to look at it another way. When we went up to Seattle, the thing we wanted most was a split of the two games. We got that, so we retained the home court advantage."

Gray was ejected for taking a swing at Dickey Saturday and several other opposing players came close to squaring off.

Another rivalry that is heating up is that of veteran center Cliff Ray of Golden State and big rookie Tom Burleson of the Sonics, who hit 29 points and grabbed 15 rebounds Saturday.

Ray said he did not think his young pivot rival could play defense and Burleson replied testily: "How would he know? He never tested me."

14-year-old super fan of SuperSonics

SEATTLE (UPI) — Of all the fans of the Seattle SuperSonics, 14-year-old Scott Jensen figures he is the most super.

Each time the Sonic business office opened its ticket windows to sell ducats for Seattle's first every playoff games in the NBA, Scott held the No. 1 position in the lineup.

He was there to buy tickets for the playoffs with Detroit, and he was there again when the Sonics went into the Western Conference semifinals against the Golden State Warriors.

Scott bought three tickets Monday morning for the Sonics-Warriors game here Thursday night.

"I've been here since 11 o'clock last night," the junior high student said. "I've been the first one in line for every playoff game."

After reserving his No. 1 spot, Scott said he spent most of the night in the family camper in the ticket office parking lot.

He obviously believes there's no doubt about Seattle winning the best-of-seven series with Golden State, and he already has counted Chicago in as the other finalist for the Western Conference title.

"I'll be down here Monday morning when tickets go on sale for the Chicago series," he said.

Keith Wilkes named NBA top rookie

NEW YORK (UPI) — They both left the UCLA campus for the NBA this season with reputations as winners. Bill Walton, the No. 1 draft choice, got the money but Keith Wilkes got the honors.

This season was supposed to belong to Walton; all the advance publicity said so. But the red-haired center with a propensity for injuries and voicing his opinions, soon found his rookie season turning into a nightmare of allegations, rumors and denials. In the end, he had played only 35 games and turned the Portland Trail Blazers management and fans against him.

The tag line on Wilkes, throughout his playing days at UCLA when he and Walton were making the Bruins nearly unbeatable, was that he was "smooth as silk." At just under 6-foot 7, Wilkes has the knack of running as hard and playing as tough as anyone else, but making it look a little easier.

Wilkes averaged 14.2 points per game and, as one of the most important contributors in the Golden State Warriors' runaway of the Pacific Division, Monday was named the NBA's Rookie of the Year.

After all these years, Wilkes seems finally to have stepped out of Walton's shadow.

"I wasn't thinking in terms of Rookie of the Year at the beginning of the season," Wilkes said, "because I really just wanted to play. When we were playing very well, people began to talk about it and I realized that I was a candidate for the Rookie of the Year award."

"Even though we had a winning season, we went through a spell when we were losing a lot of games and we weren't playing very well. But with the type of guys we had, everyone hung together. In a situation like that, when you're not playing well, it's very easy to get down on yourself, down on your teammates, down on everything because nothing's going right. You just have to accept the fact that you can't win every game. All you can do is go out and give your best effort."

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Sandra Palmer heralded a new day in women's golf Sunday when she won the richest women's golf tournament in history, the $200,000 Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle championship. She won $32,000 for first prize, an $8,000 Chrysler and three $1,000 checks for leading the tourney each day. (UPI)

Bostonian wins marathon race

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Marathon turned into a re-enactment of the American Revolution, 200 years after the start of the battle for Independence.

American colonists, winners in just four of the past 30 Boston endurance races, took the first three places in Monday's 26th annual marathon — using a stiff tailwind instead of musket powder to rout foreign invaders.

A 27-year-old Boston Minuteman named William Babcock

Minneapolis, Minn., was second in 2:11:54; foot soldier Tom Fleming of the New York Athletic Club, runnerup the past two years, was third in his fastest time ever, 2:12:05. Canadian Tom Howard of Vancouver was fourth in 2:13:22.

The 25-mile-an-hour tailwind accounted for the exceptionally fast times.

"The wind was fantastic," said the featherweight Rodgers, 27. "It just pushed you right along. You couldn't Chehalis and Hoquiam split a Black Hills League twinbill at Olympic Stadium yesterday.

The visitors took advantage of seven Grizzly errors to nab a 5 to 0 opener, but the Hoquiam came back to grab a 2-0 win in the nightcap behind Bruce Jakola's two-hit pitching. The split left the Grizzlies with a 4-4 loop mark.

Despite the fact HHS managed 12 hits in the first game, poor base running and shoddy fielding allowed Chehalis to win.

Pinchhitter Chuck McDonald who played in the game to pick up two hits, Mike Catron with two including a triple and Terry Fischer with two hits, led the Hoquiam batsmen.

"We just gave the first game away," moaned Jack Irion, Grizzly mentor.

Jakola kept things under control in the 2-0 HHS win striking out four but forcing proceedings and alleged due the government agency.

John Hartough and Steve Hakkola both had two hits in the win.

Hoquiam scored in the first inning as Catron tripled and scored on Fischer's one-baser. They added an insurance tally in the third as Fischer was aboard on an error, stole second and scored on

Mitrovich hurls victory

At least they dumped the league leaders.

Aberdeen High School handed unbeaten North Thurston its first setback in league play yesterday copping a 3 to 2 opener, but dropped a 1-0 second game.

The two pitcher's duels at Pioneer Park left the Bobcats with a 2-4 Black Hills League win-loss record.

Mark Mitrovich allowed but four hits in hurling the Aberdeen triumph. The strong-armed rightlander struck out 10, walked one and retired 14 of the last 15 batters to face him.

MITROVICH finished strong fanning five of the last six men to face him.

North Thurston scored first in the second frame on two hits and a walk to take a 2-0 lead.

The 'Cats got on the board in the third inning as Kent Kalisch singled, moved up on a passed ball and scored on a throwing error.

The Harbors won it in the 5th as Matt McCauley drag bunted for a single, Jeff Peters walked and Mick Spoon drove in a run with a ground ball single to right. Don Peters and Gary Espedal were hit by pitches forcing in the go-ahead run.

The visitors broke up a scoreless nightcap with a solo run in the sixth inning as pitcher Rick Simmons won his own game with an off-field double and eventually scoring on an infield error.

Brian Baxter, AHS hurler, lost a heartbreaker.

He allowed only three hits, struck out five and walked one.

Coach Ron Langhans commented afterward, "Mitrovich and Baxter both pitched good enough to win, but Brian lost a heartbreaker. It was one of the best pitched doubleheaders we've had."

TOMORROW the 'Cats go against Olympia at Pioneer Park in a 4:30 doubleheader.

Blanks Astros for 2nd win: San Diego pitcher shakes 'unlucky' tag

By FRED DOWN
UPI Sports Writer

Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres appears to have made an almost instant conversion from the unluckiest to the most improved pitcher in the National League.

Examining his 1974 record and looking at his 1975 performance is like looking at the work of two different pitchers—and, as a matter of fact, the 25-year-old left-hander says that's pretty much the story.

"I'm a different type of pitcher this season," Jones said, after beating the Houston Astros, 4-0, Monday night and extending his string of consecutive innings without allowing an earned run to 25. "That goes for my attitude and just about everything else."

Jones, now 2-0, had an 8-22 won-lost record in 1974 but San Diego Manager John McNamara points out that the Padres scored a total of 16 runs in 17 of those defeats.

"Actually," says Jones, "the

Don Kessinger steadying influence on young Cubs

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — The last time the Chicago Cubs won a pennant was 30 years ago. That goes back so far you may have a little trouble remembering some of the players with them then, forgotten superstars of yesteryear like Heinz Becker . . . Lenny Merullo . . . Hiram Bithorn . . . Bill Schuster . . . Ed Hanyzewski.

If some of those names from the 1945 World Series entry draw a blank, try a few with the present Cubs, eager young fellows like Ron Dunn . . . Gene Hise . . . Rob Sperring . . . Oscar Zamora . . . Pete LaCock. Still having trouble? Well here's one you're sure to know — Don Kessinger.

Yup, the same Don Kessinger, who has been doing the job quietly and capably, if not spectacularly at shortstop, year after year, seldom missing a ball game and never being involved in any controversy, simply giving the best he has in him whether the Cubs finish in the cellar the way they did last year or whether they're surprising everybody by being up there on the top the way they are now in the National League East even though the Mets ended their seven-game winning string in the opener of Sunday's doubleheader at Shea Stadium and then made it a sweep by beating them again in the finale.

Elder statesman with the club now, in point of service, anyway, the 32-year-old Kessinger is putting in his 11th straight season with the Cubs and has seen all kinds of changes since he first arrived, the same time Leo Durocher did, in 1966.

"When I came up, it was an older club," says Kessinger. "We had fellows like Larry Jackson, Bob Buhl, Lew Burdette and Dick Ellsworth. Leo took over that year and maybe you remember his classic statement — 'this is not an eighth place club.' He said that because the Cubs had finished eighth the year before. Well, he was right. We weren't an eighth place club; we finished tenth. Last from Opening Day.

"Leo then made some drastic changes. He went with young fellows like Randy Hundley, Bill Hands, Ken Holtzman and Glenn Beckert among others. The year after Leo took over, (1967, we showed tremendous improvement, finishing third in a 10-team league. We were in first place in late June or early July. In 1969, we almost won, but you know what happened."

Last year, the Cubs finished last again, and Whitey Lockman gave way as manager to Jim Marshall.

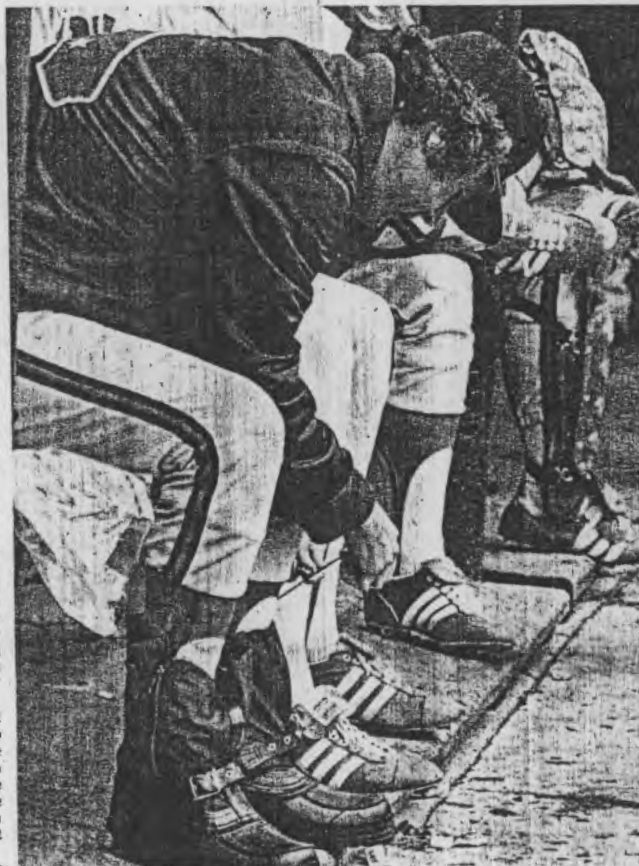

"We used to sit back and wait for the long ball because we had guys who could hit it like Ronnie Santo, Billy Williams, Ernie Banks and Jim Hickman. Our team was tailored for Wrigley Field," says Kessinger.

"Now we've got a team built for speed, a team that tries to steal and take the extra base whenever it can. It's been a long dry spell for the Cubs. We haven't won a pennant since 1945. If any people deserve a winner, the people who support the Cubs do."

"You have no idea how dedicated these people are. The crowd response to the ballplayers in Chicago is an exciting thing. Wrigley Field is small, built very close. The people are right on top of you. I remember the day we went into first place in 1967. It was a Sunday, we were playing Cincinnati at home and there was a standing room crowd. "We were a half game behind the Cardinals before the game started, and if they lost and we won, we'd be in first place. Well, you never heard anything like it in your life when the scoreboard showed they'd lost, and after we beat the Reds, we couldn't get out of our clubhouse for two hours because the fans were so happy and excited. It was as if we had won the pennant."

Kessinger has played in six All-Star games but never in a World Series. He knows there is a possibility he never will play in one.

Save hydro race fund drive set

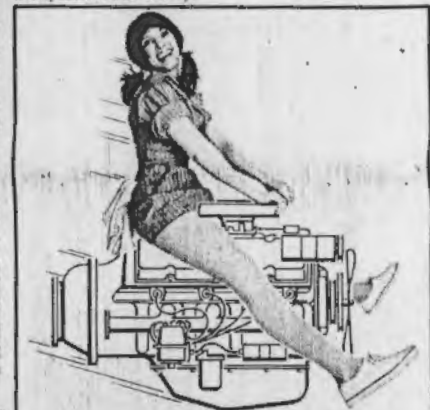

SEATTLE (UPI) — Seattle Seafair officials have appealed to the public for financial help in staging an unlimited hydroplane race this summer off the Stan Sayers piers at Seward Park.

Seattle radio and television stations KIRO have agreed to spearhead the drive to fund the race, which Seafair originally wanted to stage at the Sand Point area where it could charge admission, something not possible at the Seward Park site.

The Unlimited Racing Commission refused to sanction another race at Sand Point, forcing a change in Seafair plans. Seattle Mayor Wes Uhlman said the city would not be able to offer financial support beyond the $36,000 spent last year for police protection, crowd control and other services at Sand Point.

Tough taxation ideas talked

By GORDON SCHULTZ

OLYMPIA (UPI) — The battle of the budget shifted to the Senate today along with some tough talk against raising taxes.

All six sections of the main $5.3 billion budget proposal for the 1975-77 biennium were kicked out of the House Monday without debate. There were plenty of votes to spare.

In total, the six spending packages for public schools, higher education, community colleges, general government, capital construction, and social and health services were more than $32 million over the level recommended by the House Ways and Means Committee.

All but one were below the levels recommended by Gov. Dan Evans, but all were significantly higher than spending levels for the current biennium ending June 30.

In fact, total projected spending was just over $1 billion greater than it is now.

Senate Ways and Means Chairman Hubert Donohue, D-Dayton said the House budgets will be used "as references."

"One thing we don't want and we don't need is a tax increase," he emphasized.

Donohue said he expects to cut back total spending by as much as $100 million so that a no tax increase budget could be ready for the Senate floor by the end of next week.

One of the first items in the House version of the total budget to get the ax probably will be the $70 million earmarked for future salary increases for state employees.

Donohue pointed out that the most recent revenue estimates available to his committee are $70 million below those used by the governor and the House. That would wipe out the salary money.

Donohue also said the $12.5 million for community colleges added on the House floor probably will be cut in half by the Senate. That would be in exchange for removing some of the budgetary restraints imposed by the House, he said.

For public schools, Donohue said he would propose increasing the amount of money allocated for state support. He said the figure probably would be in the vicinity of $154 million compared with the $142 million of new apportionment funds approved by the House.

At the same time, Donohue made it clear that temporary relief to school districts which suffered special levy failures this year will be considered as a separate item.

If it gets down to a case of raising taxes to provide extra money on a temporary basis, Donohue emphasized that additional reductions in the state's overall spending plan should be considered first.

Donohue said his committee will consolidate all of the House proposals into a single document which would then incorporate the Senate's proposed changes.

When that is completed, he said, the committee may be ready to submit its proposed recommendations to the Senate Democratic and Republican caucuses by the end of the week.

A youth testified Monday that he got kicked out of a 1971 appearance by former President Richard Nixon as a possible security risk despite the fact that he was 13 years old at the time.

The testimony came as trial got under way in a $1.1 million civil suit filed by 19 persons who maintain they were

Four ranting bandits kill woman, 42

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A woman customer depositing church collection money in a bank was shot to death without reason Monday during a $13,000 robbery by four "ranting and raving" bandits, including a female.

Sheriff's deputies said they had no clues to the identities of the three male and one female robbers who wore ski masks during the holdup at a Carmichael branch of Crocker National Bank.

The victim, Mrs. Myrna Lee Opsahl, 42, wife of a Carmichael surgeon, was shot "for no reason and without provocation" by a male robber wielding a .12-gauge shotgun as the bandits entered the bank, said sheriff's spokesman Bill Miller.

She was hit at close range as the robbers ordered everyone to lie on the floor. Mrs. Opsahl died of a wound in the left midsection at American River Hospital, where her husband, Trygve, was at work.

Opsahl said his wife went to the bank to deposit weekend collections from the church their family attended.

The robbers were "ranting and raving and yelling orders back and forth," reported sheriff's inspector Terry Dwyer. "They looked disorganized."

A Crocker National spokesman estimated about $13,000 was taken from several cash drawers.

The female robber, who brandished a pistol, closely timed the operation with a wristwatch. She was described as 5-6 feet tall, weighing 110-115 pounds, 25-30 years old, wearing frosted-type glasses and of narrow face and light complexion, the FBI was told by witnesses.

Miller said investigators saw no connection between the holdup and a bank robbery in San Francisco a year ago in which fugitive heiress Patricia Hearst was identified as one of the robbers.

The robbers discarded the masks and about a dozen live rounds of 9MM ammunition outside the bank and were believed to have fled in a black and light green sports sedan reported stolen in Berkeley. The vehicle was found abandoned later in the northern Sacramento area.

The bank immediately posted a $10,000 reward for in-

Interview highlights

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Highlights of President Ford's television interview with CBS Monday night:

VIETNAM — Congress' refusal to supply further military aid to South Vietnam was probably the "initial kickoff" that prompted then-President Nguyen Van Thieu to begin the "hasty and poorly planned withdrawal" from the northern provinces that brought virtual collapse of his forces.

THIEU — U.S. officials "on the scene" in Saigon may have suggested to Thieu that resignation was the proper course, but "there was no pressure by me or anyone in Washington" to take that step. There had been no recent personal communication between the two Presidents but correspondence had been exchanged.

EVACUATION — U.S. Marines are being shifted from Hawaii to the South Pacific but are not en route to Saigon. Any evacuation operation which required U.S. Military action would be a "short-term, very precise military movement, not of a longer scale, of course." It did not now appear possible to remove South Vietnamese allies without such military involvement.

INTELLIGENCE — CIA covert intelligence operations abroad are important and necessary to a President's conduct of foreign policy. Without them, a President's "hands would be tied."

ECONOMY — He is optimistic over signs recession may be abating, and believes "we'll be in much better shape" the last half of the year.

POLITICS — He still plans to run for President next year, and Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller still is his choice as ticket-mate. "I can see no reason whatsoever — I can't foresee any — to make any change."

MIDDLE EAST — "The possibility of war is a serious one. If you're going to have a war you're going to have an oil embargo." There is a need to be even-handed with the Arabs and Israelis, one of the reasons for the current review of U.S. mideast policy.

CHANGE IS MADE — NEWPORT, Ky. (UPI) — Tired of the hassle, policeman Kenneth Pigg has changed his last name to Page.

"I answer the phone at headquarters, 'Officer Pigg,' and people hang up. They call back and say, 'Officer who?'"

"I want to make being a policeman my career — maybe even be chief some day. Can you imagine going down to, say, Paducah, and saying, 'I'm Chief Pigg from Newport?'"

Hathaway getting nod

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite the opposition of environmentalists, former Wyoming Gov. Stanley K. Hathaway apparently will be confirmed as secretary of Interior.

The former Republican governor appeared Monday to have satisfied most members of the Senate Interior Committee that he would seek a balance between the preservation of the environment and the development of natural resources.

Spokesmen for at least a dozen environmental organizations waited for a chance to attack his record as governor of Wyoming during the second day of confirmation hearings today.

But Hathaway — helped by Wyoming Democrats — testified Monday that he supported environmental protection at a time when Wyoming was seeking new industry to help try to stem an outflow of young people seeking jobs elsewhere.

As interior secretary, Hathaway said, he would represent broad national interests but not those of one state.

Indochina moves are summarized

SOUTH VIETNAM — South Vietnam's political and military leaders work to set up a government to negotiate with the Communists after President Nguyen Van Thieu's resignation. The Viet Cong demand the withdrawal of all "disguised" American military men from South Vietnam before considering peace talks. The Communists tighten their ring around Saigon, pound the strategic Bien Hoa Air Base, 14 miles northeast of the capital, and assault the district capital of Ben Luc, 16 miles southwest of Saigon. The United States accelerates its evacuation of Americans and their dependents, flying hundreds of persons out of Saigon. Australia becomes the first Western country to close its embassy in Saigon.

LAOS — North Vietnamese troops launch new attacks on a road linking Vientiane and the royal Laotian capital of Luang Prabang. Government air force T28 bombers are ordered to fly strikes against attackers. Prime Minister Prince Souvanna Phouma cables pro-Communist Pathet CAMBODIA — Radio Phnom Penh resumes broadcasting, giving the outside world its first word from the Cambodian capital since rebel Khmer Rouge troops captured the city last Thursday. New Cambodian leader Khieu Samphan says in a broadcast speech the Khmer Rouge government will follow a neutralist foreign policy. But there is still no word on the fate of deposed government leaders or Americans and other foreigners still in Phnom Penh. A United Nations spokesman in Geneva says the U.N. has received a cable saying all six of its staff members in Phnom Penh are safe. Government troops are reported still holding out in four of the country's 17 provinces.

THAILAND — The Thai government says it will return to the Khmer Rouge government all airplanes, helicopters and other military equipment brought to Thailand by fleeing soldiers.

$3 billion Equity Funding civil case finally starts

By JACK V. FOX
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The opening skirmish of "the court battle of the century" was crowded but jovial. A federal judge surveyed the throng of more than 100 lawyers who turned out for a preliminary hearing and suggested they pose for a photograph to mark "this historic moment" in jurisprudence.

The $3 billion Equity Funding civil action—aftermath of one of the biggest frauds in U.S. business history—got under way Monday.

It promises to continue for years, challenging records of legal proceedings for size, complexity, length, money and manpower.

As yet there is no indication when the actual trial will begin, and already there are 312 law firms involved.

Among the regiment of lawyers facing U.S. District Court Judge Malcolm Lucas Monday was William J. Scott, the attorney general of the state of Illinois.

Illinois is one of the defendants, along with the state of California, three national accounting firms and other corporations and individuals, including the executives of Equity Funding and its life insurance subsidiary who masterminded the fraud.

It was Scott—who is trying to extricate Illinois from the action—who predicted it "undoubtedly is going to be the court battle of the century. The stakes are two to three billion dollars, the litigants are the giants of the business world and the defendants are represented by the giants of the legal world."

The judge was asked by a lawyer for plaintiffs at one point to break the trial down into a number of smaller actions—117 of them, the judge said he would take that under consideration.

Another lawyer praised the judge's "Solomon-like" wisdom to date in presiding over two years of legal maneuvering that brought the case to this point. The judge joked that he has a friend named Gus Solomon, and asked that instead of comparing him with the great judge, the lawyers honor him by making their statements brief.

Scott argued that Illinois should be dismissed as a defendant on the grounds that it is a sovereign state, protected by the Constitution from such actions. The taxpayers of his state should not be saddled with a multimillion-dollar bill because of the actions of state insurance regulators, he said. Equity Funding was incorporated in Illinois but its head office was here.

The plaintiffs include some of the biggest names in the insurance industry, Equity Funding stockholders, banks, pension and college endowment funds, stock brokerages and others who were swindled.

One of the score of issues involved is whether the two state governments are liable for the massive fraud—the biggest in the history of the U.S. insurance industry—because regulatory officials failed to detect and stop it. Equity Funding Corp. of America, a large financial conglomerate, and one of its subsidiaries, the Equity Funding Life Insurance Co., collapsed in April, 1973 when word of the fraud leaked to Wall Street, starting a run on its stock and the intervention of federal and state investigators.

They found that more than 62,000 "policy holders" listed on the insurance firm's books, two-thirds of the total, were fictitious persons. The nonexistent policy holders made the company—and its parent corporation—appear prosperous when they were losing money, artificially inflating the worth of the company's stock. In turn, the business of the fictitious policyholders was sold for cash to other insurance companies.

The insurance companies lost millions of dollars when it was discovered there were no customers to pay premiums on the policies they bought. The corporation's bankruptcy left some of the biggest financial institutions in the country, and thousands of individual investors, holding comparatively worthless stock for which they paid millions. The company officers had profited hugely from selling their personally owned stock.

Investigators said the firm's books were so tangled in deliberate falsification that a true history of its finances may be impossible to determine.

The corporation president, Stanley Goldblum, alleged mastermind of the scheme, was sentenced to eight years in a federal trial and still faces charges in Illinois. Seventeen other executives drew terms of three to seven years.

Kissinger postpones a journey

By JUAN WALTE
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has postponed a trip to Latin America, saying he could not leave Wednesday as planned because events in Indochina "are unfolding with such unexpected speed."

He was to have visited Argentina, Brazil and Venezuela to talk about trade, the possibility of lifting economic sanctions against Cuba and other subjects. But in a statement released Monday night by a spokesman, Kissinger said President Ford had asked him to stay in Washington.

He said it was with "great reluctance and even greater personal regret" that he had to postpone the visits but that he would visit South America later.

The trip had been on again.

postpone the visit but that he would visit South America later.

The trip had been on-again-off-again for some time and was already the subject of some criticism in Latin America. After it was reduced from five nations to three by dropping Peru and Chile, press comment in some Latin publications said the trip had come to be regarded as just a perfunctory diplomatic obligation.

Kissinger's statement said: "Events in Indochina are unfolding with such unexpected speed that the President has asked me to stay in Washington in the days just ahead. It is with great reluctance, and even greater personal regret, that I must therefore postpone my trip to South America scheduled for later this week."

"I have communicated with the foreign ministers of Argentina, Brazil and Venezuela to inform them of this decision and my determination to visit South America at a later date. "Forging of strengthened ties with our neighbors in this hemisphere is a cardinal objective of our foreign policy. The aspirations of Latin America and the United States are indissolubly linked and are of significance for the rest of the world."

Constitution issue may go to voters

OLYMPIA (UPI) — The House Constitution and Elections Committee recommended approval Monday of a proposed call for a constitutional convention to rewrite the state's basic charter.

Chairman Richard King, D-Everett, said he will now ask the House Rules Committee for authority to proceed with an implementing bill that could be followed if voters go along with the idea.

Under the proposal recommended by the committee, the voters would be asked at the general election this year to declare whether they think a convention should be called.

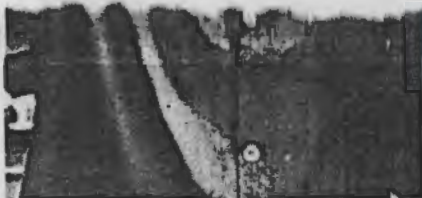

Before acting on the measure HJR 25 the committee discussed whether delegates to the convention should be elected on a partisan or nonpartisan basis.

Skip Li, legal counsel to Gov. Dan Evans, said delegates should be elected on a nonpartisan basis.

He said experience in other states has shown that conventions are likely to fail if delegates are chosen on partisan lines.

Rep. King Lysen, D-Seattle, said a partisan approach would be preferable because it would put politics out in the open rather than below the surface.

Committee action on the implementing bill is scheduled for later in the week if the House Rules Committee goes along.

Fishermen still at berth

ILWACO (UPI)—Commercial salmon fishing vessels remained tied to the docks Monday as negotiations continued between fishermen and fish buyers.

Gerald Simmons of Ilwaco, business manager for the West Coast Trawlers Association, said the key talks are with the New England Fish Co. of Seattle, largest salmon dealer in the state.

Simmons said meetings are scheduled for Monday evening for local units of the association.

Simmons said industry's initial offer was the same as last year's starting price—67 cents a pound for small Chinook, 87 cents for medium and $1.05 for large.

The Chinook salmon season opened Tuesday and continues until Oct. 31.

It wasn't until the time of the Civil War that St. Valentine's Day was popularly celebrated in the United States, according to the World Book Encyclopedia. Then, it was a festival second only to Christmas and many hand-painted cards were exchanged.

A Model Life

Fashion modeling began in the 1860's when Paris designer Charles Frederick Worth used his wife Marie to model his creations. Before that time, dress designs were displayed in sketches or on wooden dummies. The first mannequins, as they were called, posed for showings. It was not until after the First World War that modeling clothing for photographers became a distinct occupation. Today, a top fashion photography model can make more than $100,000 a year, but a modeling career seldom lasts more than a decade.

Officials must here today to discuss federal plans to raise the export price of natural gas.

MacDonald said the meeting requested by the U.S. State Department would not affect the Canadian government's plans to raise the export price of natural gas from its present level of $1 per thousand cubic feet to between $1.50 and $1.60.

"We made clear last fall that there would be further increases ... and I repeated that at the first ministers' conference. It shouldn't exactly be a matter of surprise the fact that we're going ahead," MacDonald told reporters.

The cabinet will consider national energy board price increase proposals this week and could have a decision as early as Thursday.

The minister said today's meeting would only examine the price question and not consider the problem of supply, another matter worrying the United States. MacDonald said he would not attend the meeting with U.S. officials, but representatives of the departments of External Affairs, Energy, Mines and Resources, and the National Energy Board would be present.

Oregon asks for help in death probe

MEDFORD, Ore. (UPI) — Oregon state police worried about a mistaken impression Monday in their efforts to find a Los Angeles couple regarding the Richard Cowden family murder case here.

Police said some people telephoning here on the case, particularly from the Los Angeles area, had assumed incorrectly that those officers are trying to reach in Southern California are suspects in the death of the four Cowdens.

The skeletal remains of Cowden, his wife, and two small children were found in a rugged area near the California line south of here, and an examination showed at least two had been shot.

Officers said a couple in their late 20s or early 30s with three young children, two with biblical names, and the third baby in an aluminum frame back pack, had stopped to talk with a resident of the area the day the Cowdens disappeared last Sept. 1. The man was reported to have said he was a computer technician, and was described as about six-foot tall with dark brown hair and a bushy, curly beard.

Thus far there has been no motive discovered by officers investigating the deaths of the Cowdens, who were found earlier this month about 6 1/2 miles upstream from their campsite.

Group asks questions on n-financing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Authorization of funds for a proposed multi-billion dollar nuclear power plant in Tennessee could violate provisions of the Environmental Policy Act, a coalition of ten citizen groups charges.

In a letter addressed to Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., chairman of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, the coalition said authorizing funds for construction of the Clinch River plutonium breeder should not be made until all basic studies on costs and environmental impact are completed.

The committee is scheduled to vote Thursday on an Energy Research and Development

Death penalty argued before supreme court

By CHARLOTTE MOULTON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal government and North Carolina argued in the Supreme Court Monday for continuation of the death penalty. A lawyer for a condemned man said it should be abolished forever as an affront to human decency.

All nine justices were present for 90 minutes of arguments on capital punishment in America, including Justice William O. Douglas, partially paralyzed from a stroke, who planned to enter a New York clinic today for physical therapy.

There are 253 persons on death rows in 22 states. The case before the court involved one of these, Jesse Thurman Fowler, a 26-year-old truck driver sentenced to die in the North Carolina gas chamber for killing a man after a crap game.

In 1972 the Supreme Court ruled 5-4 that the death penalty was being used so inconsistently among defendants as to violate the Constitution's ban on "cruel and unusual punishment."

Since then, 31 states have interpreted that ruling to permit capital punishment in cases where state law makes it mandatory for all defendants. By legislation or judicial interpretation, many have tightened their laws to make it mandatory. North Carolina's highest court, for example, made death the only penalty for rape and first-degree murder.

Professor Anthony G. Amsterdam of Stanford University Law School, who won the 1972 case, contended Monday there is no way under North Carolina law that the death sentence can be evenhandedly administered. "There are a whole variety of ways a man can get off," he said.

In addition, he said, the Constitution forbids a penalty so inconsistent with "contemporary standards of decency."

U.S. Solicitor General Robert H. Bork and Jean A. Benoy of Raleigh, deputy attorney general of North Carolina, urged the court to leave the whole matter to Congress and the state legislatures.

Bork asked that capital

Teachers at capital

OLYMPIA (UPI) — An estimated 10,000 teachers were expected to rally around the Capitol today in support of more money for public schools.

But the chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee said Monday the teachers are wasting their time.

Sen. Hubert Donohue, D-Dayton, said the teachers would be better off if they stayed on the job instead of demonstrating.

"It's not going to influence me," he said. "It sounds like just another vacation day with people sitting out on the lawn basking in the sun."

Donohue said if the teachers really were concerned about education they would stay in the classrooms.

"The only people who suffer from things like this are the kids," he said.

Donohue, one of the most outspoken members of the Senate, said he is more concerned about the state's total 3.5 million population, most of whom are on the job trying to make a living.

"They are depending on some of us down here to use a little common sense," he said. He said Gov. Dan Evans' proposal for a temporary tax increase to provide more money for schools faces a tough time in the legislature.

"What does he think we are, a bunch of sheep?" Donohue remarked in an interview. He said the governor apparently was reflecting "scare tactics" put on by the teachers.

The Senate's version of the education budget for the 1975-77 biennium will probably include at least $154 million more support for schools than the present level, he said.

Donohue expressed concern that if additional tax money is pumped into the schools it probably would be channeled into locally negotiated salary increases for teachers rather than property tax reductions.

He also said he is particularly concerned because the cost of educating students in some districts is nearly twice what it is in others.

"If the high cost districts are required to get by with less money for a change, it might be an opportunity for them to clean house," he said.

The committee is scheduled to vote Thursday on an Energy Research and Development Agency request for appropriations to build the proposed reactor near Oak Ridge, Tenn.

The coalition says the committee, in its haste to enact the program, is disregarding relevant studies on the project which will not be completed until June.

"We find it inexplicable," the letter said, "that the JCAE proposes to plunge precipitously forward with an authorization prior to completion of such basic studies."

"Such haste will only serve to intensify public doubts as to the wisdom of the program and the validity of the committee's ultimate decision," the letter added.

The studies in question include a report from the General Accounting Office on the project's cost, a final environmental impact statement by ERDA, and hearings by both ERDA and Congress on safety and economic aspects of the program.

The coalition, which includes Ralph Nader's Congress Watch, Common Cause and the Sierra Club, further charged that ERDA appears to have violated the Environmental Policy Act by proposing legislation for the plant without first filing an environmental impact statement.

"Indeed, there is doubt as to the legality of ERDA's proposal for legislation authorizing... the Clinch River breeder reactor demonstration plant," the letter said.

"Under the National Environmental Policy Act, a federal agency may not propose such legislation without first completing an environmental impact statement."

A plutonium breeder is a nuclear power reactor which produces electricity by transforming uranium into plutonium.

The coalition's primary objections to the plant are the risks and possible accidents involved in handling the volatile plutonium, the high cost of the project and the economic plausibility of plutonium-derived electricity as opposed to other energy sources.

HIGH GODDESS
JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI)—Ceres, the mythological goddess of grain and bountiful harvests, stands 400 feet above the Missouri River atop the state capital.

ERDA urged the Senate to leave the whole matter to Congress and the state legislatures.

Bork asked that capital punishment be found constitutional, regardless of how the Fowler case comes out.

Beno argued that if capital punishment must be abolished because authorities still might use it inconsistently, the same would apply to putting a convicted man in jail, and then "you have done away with the entire criminal justice system in the United States."

Amsterdam countered that depriving a man of his life is "totally irremediable."

Justice Thurgood Marshall said the percentage of blacks on death row far exceeds the proportion in the state's population. Fowler is black. Beno rejected the suggestion that the criminal justice system discriminates by race.

We're concerned where you're concerned

... especially when you're thinking about the advisability of buying a home.
Owning your own home helps you save money... provides room for your family to grow... gives you a sense of security and becomes an investment in the future.
And because REALTORS® believe that every citizen should be able to enjoy these advantages, we're concerned with ways to make it possible for you: finding sources for mortgage credit... working for lower property taxes... eliminating discrimination... and rehabilitating older homes to help ease the housing pinch.

"Buy Rainier BankBonds."

I've been a stockbroker for 15 years, but I've never recommended putting your money in the market until you've established a sound savings program to fall back on. And for my money, Rainier BankBonds look pretty good.

They pay a lot more interest than a regular savings account. And your higher interest rate is guaranteed in writing by Rainier National Bank.

They're also safe. Your money is fully insured up to $40,000 by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

So, if you're interested in a guaranteed investment, my advice is this: put some money in Rainier BankBonds, first. Once you've done that, and you're ready to move on to bigger things in the market, I know lots of good stockbrokers who can help you do it.

PROBATION/PAROLE OFFICER OR COUNSELOR

DSHS 4-47A

PRIOR RECORD:

A review of local law enforcement and FBI record indicate that on 10-2-61 [REDACTED] was committed to the McClarron School for Boys in Woodburg, Oregon for juvenile delinquency. [REDACTED] told me that he had been committed following a series of petty thefts resulting from getting in with the wrong crowd, a lack of supervision at home and the breakup of his parent's marriage.

On 8-18-63 [REDACTED] was arrested in Medford, Oregon for juvenile auto theft. He told me that this theft occurred when he ran away from the juvenile detention home.

[REDACTED] was next arrest 2-10-67 in Montesano, Washington on charges of Burglary and Indecent Liberties. He was committed to Western State Hospital for observation as a sexual psychopath on 2-15-67 and remained there until 8-25-67. This commitment apparently followed an incident in which [REDACTED] crawled under the community hall and drilled holes through the floor of the women's restroom. At the same time, a number of youngsters, aged 11 - 16 reported a number of incidents in which [REDACTED] had threatened or physically abused them using such things as a knife, bow and arrow and rope. The staff at the hospital found him not to meet the criteria for commitment as a sexual psychopath, but felt he did require treatment as a mentally ill person. He was discharged from the hospital on 8-25-67 and the charges apparently were subsequently dropped.

[REDACTED] was next arrested in Tacoma, Washington on 12-4-67 for Disorderly (Possession of Stolen Property) and investigation of Larceny. Disposition is shown as $100 bail posted on Disorderly. [REDACTED] disclaims any memory for this incident.

[REDACTED] was next arrested 12-19-69 in Sacramento, California for Grand Theft Auto. After a 90 day diagnostic, he was sentenced to California State Prison on 5-6-70 for a term of from six months to five years. He was paroled 4-26-71 and was discharged from parole 5-31-74.

On 9-10-72, [REDACTED] was arrested in Portland, Oregon for criminal activities in drugs. He received three years probation. [REDACTED] proclaims innocence in any wrong-doing in this case, claiming that his brother was using drugs and that he had gone to Portland to attempt to gather evidence to use against the pusher who was supplying his brother. He just happened to be in the pushers house when it was raided by police.

OFFENSE:

As Your Honor presided at Mr. [REDACTED]'s trial and thus heard the full evidence presented in this case, I do not feel it is necessary to go into the offense in great detail. Police investigative reports indicate that on July 9 or 10, 1974, [REDACTED] beat [REDACTED], [REDACTED] and [REDACTED], ages 6, 3 and 2, the children of his wife by a previous marriage. Apparently [REDACTED] beat the children with a belt, purchased specifically for the purpose of administering discipline, so severely that the bruises the children suffered came to the attention of a babysitter who called the police.

The children were removed from the home and all were admitted to Harrison Memorial Hospital for examination by a pediatrician who concluded that the children all suffered from a battered child syndrome.

Licensed day care mothers who had taken care of the children gave statements to the police to the effect that the children had appeared to have been abused on a number of occasions with evidence of bloody noses, black eyes, various bruises and burned hands.

Although [REDACTED] was not charged with any sexual offense, the possibility of sexual abuse also came up during the police investigation. The oldest boy, [REDACTED], reported to police that he had observed [REDACTED] place his penis in [REDACTED]'s mouth. Viola Wagner, who operates the interim home in which the children were placed after their removal from the [REDACTED] home, reported to police that [REDACTED] had told her that her daddy hurts her on the floor and that her vagina hurts when he puts things there. This lead the police to question the children and [REDACTED] indicated that in addition to seeing [REDACTED] put his penis in [REDACTED]'s mouth, he had seen him put his penis against [REDACTED]'s front area.

DEFENDANT'S VERSION:

I interviewed [REDACTED] in my office and he stated that on the day of the offense, he had the flu, his wife was down with pneumonia and he had been having troubles on the job. He said that he had disciplined [REDACTED] for playing with a poisoness pen and [REDACTED] for going potty on the floor. He said that [REDACTED] had been sent in to go to the bathroom, but that he went in and right back out, so that [REDACTED] knew he did not do as he had been told. He said that he told [REDACTED] to go back in but that [REDACTED] had thrown a tantrum instead. He walked over to spank [REDACTED] and got kicked in the testicles. He stated that he felt he was just punishing the children for their transgressions and did not realize he had gone so far. He said that when he did realize how severe he had been, he held the kids and checked them out, but that they did not look too bad to him. He admitted to using the belt to discipline the children, but stated that it was doubled up with the buckle in his hand and that he did not use the buckle end on the children. He also stated that the children were very fair skinned so that they bruised easily. He also stated this was the first time he had used a belt on the children, indicating that he had previously used a ruler, but that it had gotten broken. He attributed the bruises reported by babysitters to injuries the children had incurred while playing.

██████ stated that after the incident he and his wife had discussed finding other ways of disciplining the children, stating that it "hurt him as much as it hurt the kids."

██████ denied any sexual abuse of ██████, stating that this came up only because the prosecutor was looking for more "dirt". He also stated that ██████ will say anything in effort to get attention.

EVALUATION:

██████ was born in Bremerton, Washington, one of three children born to his natural parents. He lived in the Bremerton area until he was nine years old and then moved with his family to Oregon.

After the move to Oregon, the parents divorced and apparently neither one of them were able to care for him. From then on, he lived in foster homes or in juvenile homes until he entered the Navy in November, 1965.

He was in the Navy for approximately 7 weeks and then received what he claims was a General Discharge for medical reasons. He stated that he was unable to adapt to the service, was having emotional problems and was too immature at the time. The report I have received from Western State Hospital indicates that he was discharged from the Navy for involvement in homosexual activities.

After his discharge from the Navy, ██████ resided with his father in the Aberdeen area until he was committed to Western State Hospital in 1967.

After his discharge from the hospital, he went to Tacoma where he attended Tacoma Vocational Technical Institute for a short period taking welding. He did not have the aptitude for welding and dropped out of that course. He then returned to his father's home where he remained until 1969 at which time he went to Portland, Oregon.

In Portland he married a girl whom he only remembers as Becky. The marriage lasted for only about one month, at which time he claims she left him, taking everything they owned. The marriage was annulled.

██████ claims that he then went to Nevada where he obtained employment with a carnival and worked with the carnival until he was arrested in December, 1969 for Auto Theft. He served approximately one and one half years in the California State Prison and was paroled in April, 1971 to the Grays Harbor area. While in the Grays Harbor area, he lived with his father and worked as a shake splitter in the family shake mill as well as other mills in the area. He moved to Bremerton in January, 1974 in order to attend Olympic College taking a drafting course. He did not complete the course, but obtained employment as a laborer for a septic tank.

*Missing
Septic tank CO.*

██████████
██████████
from Parole
manufacturing company. He was discharged on May 31, 1974.

With the exception of his drug related arrest in Portland, In September, 1972, ██████████ appeared to be satisfactorily meeting his parole obligations.

██████████ met his wife, ██████████, while attending Olympic College and they were married on June 14, 1974. Mrs. ██████████ has apparently experienced some problems herself in that this is her third marriage. She has been receiving counseling at the Community Counseling Service for several months. She has had difficulty in maintaining discipline over her children and providing them with proper care and apparently was an active participant in the beatings her husband administered the children particularly in the case of ██████████ whom she reportedly held down while ██████████ used the belt.

I have obtained copies of the psychological report and discharge summary from Western State Hospital. The psychologist felt that ██████████ was a "rather emotionally deprived and mutilated individual whose best level of adjustment approximates one of a impulsive, schizoid. There is sufficient evidence that under minimal stress he probably has psychotic episodes in which his anger and hostilities are turned upon himself giving him a rather decidedly self-destructive appearance." The psychologist felt that he could be described even EITHER as a "personality pattern disturbance, schizoid type" or as a "schizophrenic reaction paranoid type in remission." At the hospital ██████████ participated in group therapy and recreational activities and was considered cooperative. At the time of discharge, the members of the staff felt that he had received maximum benefits from hospitalization.

* Concerning a potential probation plan, ██████████ proposes to reside with his wife at his father's home in Moclips, Washington and continue his present employment as a splitterman for the Graham Shake Company in Aloha, Washington. This is a job he started 10-14-74 after having been layed off from his job in Bremerton. He states that he had been seeking counseling in the Community Counseling Service in Bremerton and that he would plan to continue counseling at a similar type agency in the area of his residence. He has also stated that even though he and his wife have been deprived permanently of custody of her children, he feels they are young enough to start another family and hope to have more children in the future.

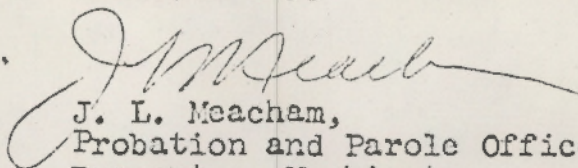

██████████ is a 27-year-old married man with a history of socially unacceptable behavior dating back to age 14. His behavior has involved indecent liberties, burglary, auto theft, drugs, homosexuality and child battering. He has experienced commitment to juvenile institutions, to a mental hospital and to the California State Prison. The Western State Hospital psychological report of 3-14-67 indicated that under minimal stress he probably was subject to psychotic episodes in which his anger and hostility was turned upon himself. It would appear that this anger and hostility has turned from inward to outward as evidenced by his abuse of these three small children. It is my opinion that Mr. [REDACTED] has proven himself to be a threat to the community and should be placed in a closely controlled structured environment for treatment. In view of the nature of the offense and [REDACTED]'s history of mental illness, it is my feeling that his treatment should be psychiatrically supervised. I would respectfully suggest that if the Court sentences [REDACTED] to an institution, a recommendation be made that he serve his sentence at the Washington State Reformatory mental health unit.

RECOMMENDATION:

It is recommended that [REDACTED] be sentenced to the Department of Social and Health Service, Division of Adult Corrections for placement in an appropriate correctional institution.

Submitted by,

J. L. Meacham,
Probation and Parole Officer
Bremerton, Washington

Re: [REDACTED]

Dear Detective Dunn:

Per your request noted below is a report on my work regarding the above-entitled individual:

I was asked by Warren K. Sharpe, Deputy Prosecuting Attorney for Kitsap County, to do some investigation concerning Mr. [REDACTED] to see if I could find where [REDACTED] was employed during a certain period of time in Kitsap County. The rumor was that [REDACTED] was employed as a truck driver for a septic tank company called "KNT" on Kitsap Way, Bremerton, Wa. from January 1974 to May 1974.

First I called a Mrs. Sue Morgan. Mrs. Morgan ran the child care center where the [REDACTED] children stayed during the day. She recalled that [REDACTED] worked for a septic tank company as a truck driver but could not remember the name. We ended the conversation and she later called to say that she thought the company was called "Dynacast Inc". I telephoned this company and found that [REDACTED] was never employed there.

Second I checked with the juvenile probation officer - Connie Anderson - who was involved in the [REDACTED] deprivation matter and asked her about [REDACTED]'s employment. She recalled that he worked as a truck driver for a septic tank company called "KNT" in Bremerton.

Third, Mr. Sharpe called the probation officer of [REDACTED] - Jerry Meacham- and requested information about [REDACTED]'s employment. The probation officer checked with the probation reports and stated that [REDACTED] worked for a septic tank company named "KNT" on Kitsap Way, Bremerton. Note: this employment was never verified at the time by Mr. Meacham.

I found that there was no company named "KNT" on Kitsap Way, Bremerton nor was there a septic tank company named "KNT" in Kitsap County, Washington. I checked with telephone directories for the entire Kitsap County area , checked with the telephone information operators, and also checked with the other septic tank companies in Kitsap County to see if the other companies had ever heard of a company named "KNT". Besides checking septic tank companies I also checked construction companies. (Note: the only possible lead was a septic tank company named "Kenton" - sounds like KNT - in Portland, Oregon. I did not call them.)

After finding no septic tank company named "KNT", I proceeded to call all of the septic tank companies in Kitsap County to see if  was ever employed with any company. I stated my inquiry to each company generally like this: "Did your company have a  employed there from January 1974 to May 1974?" After receiving negative replies, I further tried to jog their memories by adding "He was employed as a truck driver." For every company I received a negative reply. Some companies (small ones run by one man) relied on their memories and told me "No." and other companies verified with their bookkeepers and then told me "No.". Below is a list of every company that I called:

A-1 Sanitation Service, Salmonberry Road, Port Orchard 876-4897

A-1 Septic Tank Service, Poulsbo Junction, Poulsbo 779-4000

Puget Power: Wm. [REDACTED] signed up for power as of 5/31/74 at [REDACTED] McKenzie, Bremerton.

Power turned off 11/8/74, forwarding address: Box [REDACTED] Moclips.

Address prior to signing up on McKenzie shown as c/o Mrs. [REDACTED], Rt. [REDACTED] Box [REDACTED], Port Orchard (mother). He listed employment as with K & T Const & Sierra Ltd.

Oly College: [REDACTED] started attending 1/3/74. Dropped out 5/3/74. Attended 79 days with no absences. On 5/3/74 he told them he had a job with Bill Davis Construction., unknown where. He would have been in school every day, except holidays, and except the spring vacation (Mar 25-Mar 29). The 1st quarter he had a pretty heavy schedule (8 AM to 9:30 PM. However, this would not have been every day as some classes only meet 2 or 3 days a week (especially the night classes). The second quarter, his classes were scheduled approx. 11 AM to 5 PM. They take strict attendance on the Manpower Act as they only get paid for the days a student actually attends.

Parole Counselor (Jerry Meacham) did pre-sentence investigation. [REDACTED] was paroled from Calif to Aberdeen area 4/26/71. Trans. to Bremerton Jan 1974. He no longer has employment and current address sheets filled out monthly by parolee as these are destroyed when parole terminated.

[REDACTED]'s family lived in Bremerton when he was small. They moved to Oregon somewhere around his teen years. Mother and father divorced and mother returned to Brem. (Pt Orchard) area where she remarried. Father believed to live around Grays Harbor. If this is true, subject no doubt would have been travelling between the two areas.)

Checking on [REDACTED]'s employment comes to a blank. None of the employers listed by [REDACTED] have records of him; or the employer cannot be located.

[REDACTED] arrested by BPD on 7/15/74 for 2nd degree assault (abuse of step-children).
transferred to Kitsap CSO 7/16/74 and released on bond from there 7/19/74.

Kitsap CSO had only one contact with [REDACTED]. On 10/26/73 he was talked to re: reckless driving. Gave an address at that time as Rt. [REDACTED] Box [REDACTED] Pt. Orchard. (mother's).
On 1/30/74 he registered as a transfer parolee from Aberdeen.

1 4-19-75 1200 hrs.: LT. KRASKE called me at my residence to advise me of the case and suggested that I call Grays Harbor Sheriff's Office and offer assistance in the case, and to see if the homicides might be in any way connected with the victims we have either on case 74-123376 or 875-29267.

2 1210 hrs.: Called SHERIFF SUMPTER at Grays Harbor Sheriff's Office and reviewed his case with him. He requested immediate assistance. He said that he had seen the victims in Aberdeen hitchhiking on Monday the 14th. He said that they were found on the beach at Moclips by an older couple who were strolling. They had been camped in a driftwood lean-to. They were found approximately 200 ft. inside the Quinault Indian Reservation and since this is a government reservation, the FBI is investigating the case. The FBI agent at Olympia who has case responsibility is PETE SCHEPP. AGENT SCHEPP has advised him that if the suspect is a reservation resident, then the FBI will pursue prosecution, but if the suspect turns out to be Caucasian, then the Sheriff's office will have jurisdiction. He said one of the victims was bound in back and stabbed twice. The other victim was bound in the front and stabbed four times. The identity of the two victims was made positively by the parents. He said there is no reason to believe that the victims were kidnapped from the Island and taken to Moclips and dumped but rather they were camped out on the beach for a night or two and then killed there.

- 3 4-19-75 1220 hrs.: Called LT. KRASKE and advised him of the status of the case. He said he would get authorization for me to drive to Grays Harbor.
- 4 1250 hrs.: LT. KRASKE called back and said to proceed to Grays Harbor.
- 5 1355 hrs.: I arrived at the Communications Center and obtained copies of the missing persons reports on the two girls.
- 6 1400 hrs.: I was en route from the office to Grays Harbor.
- 7 1640 hrs.: I arrived in Moclips and met with DET. NICK JOHNSON and DET. TOM RANNICK who were in the process of canvassing the residences in Moclips for any possible leads. They took me to the crime scene which was located on a spit on the sand up off the main portion of the beach and just south of the Quinault River. The two detectives speculated that they were probably killed Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning since no camp fire nor remnants were found nearby. The victims had apparently been sleeping and were found on top of their sleeping bags. They were nude from the waist down and their shirts were pulled up around their necks. The sleeve of the shirt of the [REDACTED] girl was found tied around the neck of the [REDACTED] girl. Sixty-eight dollars was found at the scene - robbery was not the motive. Their hiking boots and socks were turned upside down on a log such as an experienced hiker would do. The twine that bound them was probably taken from their packs since they were experienced hikers and this would be the type of twine hikers would normally use. The knot which was found on the [REDACTED] girl was similar to that tied by a gill-netter but the knot on the [REDACTED] girl was not distinctive. There was no indication of sexual abuse or any attempts at dismemberment. There were no signs of struggle at the camp when they first processed the crime scene.
- 8 1830 hrs.: The Grays Harbor detectives interviewed CECIL STANLEY, who lives in a residence near the crime scene and is a Coast Guardsman stationed at Pt. Grenville. He first met the victims about a month ago when they came to Moclips with a DAVID ST. MARY and another boy who is known only as KIM. They were camped out with the two victims on the beach - he did not know their last names but knew them only as [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]. He said that he wouldn't suspect ST. MARY or KIM to be involved in the slayings. He said that he had not had sexual relations with the girls but felt that both DAVE and KIM had. He said that he had been to DAVE's residence on Vashon and described it as being in Burton near the bridge and a schoolhouse. DAVE's father owns a hop farm in Yakima. DAVE had a friend who was also in the Coast Guard and his name is CLAY GATCHELL and who was formerly stationed at Pt. Grenville. He thinks that CLAY now lives somewhere on Maury Island, his address is Rt. 1, Box 232, Burton. STANLEY said that another male who may know the victims is a DALE MAUDER who goes by an alias of "SPIDER." He drives a black V/W Bug and lives in Pacific Beach near the garbage dump. STANLEY said that he does not know anyone who would wish ill to the victims.

9 4-19-75 1930 hrs.: I called SGT. JOHN BEARD at home and reviewed the case with him. He said that the KIM who CECIL STANLEY spoke of is KIM MANARD who was one of the victim's roommate. The other names were unfamiliar to him.

10 2000 hrs.: DET. JOHNSON, DET. RANNICK and I went out to Coleman's Funeral Home in Hoquiam where the autopsies on the victims had been performed earlier that day. They introduced me to the coroner, BLAINE JEX and to CHIEF JAY SKEWES of Hoquiam P.D. Hoquiam P.D. was fingerprinting the victims when we arrived. Coroner JEX said that the surgeon who performed the autopsy told him that death had occurred at least 48 hours previous to the victims' being discovered, which would place time of death Wednesday or earlier. He said that when the victims were found, lividity was consistent with the position in which the bodies were lying. I examined the two bodies and noted the following:

█ had 2 wounds - #1 was a 4" laceration along the right side of her mandible which was approximately 3/4" deep and cut through the fatty portion. In line with this wound on the left clavicle was an abrasion which would have been consistent with an injury caused if the knife that slashed the throat had continued on past and then struck the clavicle. #2 wound was described as a deep penetrating wound behind the right ear. █'s wounds were as follows: #1 - a deep penetrating wound, again below the right ear. #2 was a wound which was under her chin towards the left mandible, and was an upward wound. #3 was a ragged puncture type stab wound approximately 4" above her hip on the right side of her back. #4 was on the center line of her back approximately 6" above the hip line. To reiterate: █ was tied behind her and █ was tied in front. When the girls were found, █'s hands were folded up underneath her chin as if in a defensive position. Both girls had their shirts up around their necks and were nude from the breasts down. Their clothing was found neatly piled nearby and their shoes were upside down on a log. They were both found on top of their sleeping bags.

11 2055 hrs.: DET. JOHNSON, DET. RANNICK, and I went out to Grays Harbor Sheriff's Office and they said that one of the individuals that had been interviewed during their canvass of Moclips that day had been

1 In checking the records at the courthouse it was found that [REDACTED]'s DOB was 4-[REDACTED]-47 and he was described as 5'11" 165 lbs. FBI #602070E. His address is Box [REDACTED], Moclips. He has brown hair and brown eyes. Grays Harbor County #9930. He was convicted in 1967 for Indecent Liberties by Grays Harbor Sheriff's Office and sentenced to the Sexual Psychopathic Ward at Western State Hospital. His home is approximately 200 yards south of where the victims were found and in interviewing [REDACTED] earlier that day, [REDACTED] told them that he gave the girls a ride to the beach but was unaware of their deaths. In searching the crime scene DET. JOHNSON said they found a utility bill from Puget Sound Power & Light which was buried in the sand near the camp where the girls were found. In talking to [REDACTED] about this [REDACTED] said that he had never been near the site and that when he walked along the beach he always walked south of his residence.

15 4-22-75 1200 hrs.: I obtained a driver license photo on [REDACTED] from DMV in Olympia.

16 1400 hrs.: I called S/A CLARK SMITH of the FBI Seattle office who said that during the search warrant on [REDACTED]'s residence, bloody clothing was found but no knife. He said that S/A SHEPP has all physical evidence and will be submitting it to the FBI laboratory at Washington, D.C. on 4-23-75.

17 1500 hrs.: I called DET. NICK JOHNSON who said that [REDACTED] is a good suspect in the two girls' homicide at this point as is his brother, [REDACTED], born 6-[REDACTED]-43, 6'1" 165 lbs. who is also living with [REDACTED] and his wife [REDACTED] at the Moclips' residence.

18 4-23-75 1110 hrs.: Both victims were cancelled as missing persons in the Sea-King system.

19 Summary: The homicide investigation will be pursued by Grays Harbor Sheriff's Office and the FBI and our Department will assist them in any way possible. The subject [REDACTED] will be checked out as a possible suspect in the case #75-29267 and further information developed on him will be included under that case number. Debts Creep U Are Seldom Se

BY MIKE LAYTON
P-I Olympia Bureau

OLYMPIA — During all the rhetoric on the floor of the House over passage of the budget bills recently, no mention was made of the long-term debt — complete with interest payments — that capital budgets are piling up.

The obligation on the major tax sources — chiefly sales taxes — for state college and other buildings, pollution control and recreational facilities and the like, is becoming quite a figure.

Ten years ago the state's bonded indebtedness, according to State Treasurer Robert O'Brien's office, was $369.9 million. That doesn't include all the local bond debt, for schools, city halls, courthouses and so forth.

At the end of last year the state's bond debt had grown to $960.7 million, an increase of $590.8 million or 159 per cent, in a decade.

That's money that will some day have to be paid back, by the taxpayer or the taxpayer's kids or his grandkids.

It's "easy money," since not much of it comes out of the budget for biennium or the next one.

There's a factor that voters don't notice when they approve these things. (Yes, most were OK'd by the voters, or have been in the past. No more, however; read on.)

Batten was arrested "in the county" but not at his home, Janhunen said, and offered no resistance.

"We're not really very sure of the circumstances or the motive, and I don't want to interfere with the selection of an unbiased jury by discussing that part of the case," Janhunen said. "We're a small county and we're going to be very conservative about how we proceed."

Moclips Man Arrested In Ocean Beach Slayings

BY RICHARD HARDESTY

A shake mill worker from Moclips has been arrested in connection with the stabbing deaths of two Vashon Island women whose bodies were found on an ocean beach near the Moclips River.

The suspect, William C. Batten, 28, was charged in Grays Harbor County District Court Saturday with two counts of first degree murder. Judge Thomas Parker set Batten's bail at $200,000 and appointed the Aberdeen law firm of Charette and Brown to represent him in court.

Batten is being held in the county jail at Montesano and is to be arraigned in Superior Court today.

He is accused of murdering Tina Jacobsen, 19, and Gaelisa (Gael) Burton, 18, with a butcher knife having "a blade longer than three inches," according to the indictment.

The women's bodies were found April 18, partially clothed, atop their sleeping bags in a log shelter on the beach just inside the Quinault Indian reservation. Their hands had been tied behind their backs and they had been stabbed several times. They had not been sexually assaulted.

The two women had hitchhiked from their Vashon Island homes to the beach April 14 for what was to have been a three-day vacation from work.

County Prosecutor Curtis Janhunnen and Sheriff Harold Sumpter said in a joint statement that Batten was originally from the Bremerton area but had lived in Grays Harbor County "off and SALEM — A man paroled after 12 years in prison for a 1961 mutilation murder in Portland was arrested and arraigned Tuesday in the mutilation slaying of a Scio woman Saturday.

Richard Laurence Marquette, 40, of 1865 Highway Ave. NE, Salem, was charged in an indictment issued by the Marion County grand jury with the April 19 murder of Betty Lucille Wilson, 35.

Marquette was paroled from the Oregon State Penitentiary in January 1973 after serving 12 years of a life sentence for the slaying of Joan Rae Caudle. He appeared Tuesday in Marion County District Court.

Mrs. Wilson's body was found under a bridge over Brown's Island slough by a catfish angler Saturday afternoon.

The legs, arms, head and breasts had been severed. The sexual organs had been removed and were not recovered with the body. There were numerous deep slashes in the hands and arms.

Marquette was arrested by Marion County sheriff's Chief of Detectives Jim Byrnes early Tuesday at his residence following service of a search warrant on his trailer house, pickup truck and camper.

Byrnes said Marquette was at the residence when authorities arrived and remained there until his arrest.

Marion County Dist. Atty. Gary Gortmaker said he could not divulge what evidence led to issuance of the search warrant.

The victim is believed to have gone to the Pepper Tree Restaurant about 11 p.m. Friday and left with a man in his late 30s or early 40s about 12:30 a.m. Saturday.

Gortmaker said the state will allege that Mrs. Wilson arrived alive at Marquette's trailer house and died there.

He said his office will ask that the return on the search warrant be sealed from public inspection at least until the defense counsel can examine the evidence.

Marquette asked the court to appoint counsel for him, saying he had no funds.

Byrnes said Marquette was employed as an apprentice by Salem Plumbing at the time of his arrest and had lived at

Salem neighbors say murder suspect Marquette quiet man

SALEM — Neighbors, a landlady, a cocktail waitress and others who had befriended Richard L. Marquette looked at his roped-off trailer in Salem Tuesday, wondering what might be inside.

The former Portland man, who spent 12 years in prison following his first-degree murder conviction for the 1961 strangulation death of Joan Caudle, has lived at the Highway Trailer Court at 1865 Highway Ave. NE since 1973. He has been quiet, friendly and hard working at his trade as a plumber's helper, acquaintances said.

He lived alone, with a skinny calico cat as his pet, which came and went on a walkway constructed up to a side window.

The cat went in and out every few minutes Tuesday morning, as police officers sat in their cars to make sure no one ventured past the roped-off trailer yard. A wood plank, its letters burned in, announced the resident: R.L. Marquette.

"Pleasant, but kind of a loner," said a neighbor, Rose Walt, twirling her coffee cup on the tiny table. "He lived in the little brown trailer a while and was never any trouble. Then he moved to the blue one, and worked as a plumber's helper.

"I didn't see anything, but the detectives have been talking to the landlady. It was last night he was arrested. It's his cat. I've heard him call it. He worked steadily, mostly wearing ordinary clothes, pants and shirt. Yes, he washed his clothes down there (indicating a small wash house). He just was a quiet neighbor."

The owner of the Highway Avenue Trailer Court, Mrs. Ed Janzen, was sad.

She said Marquette's parole officer first called her to arrange residence for him, and told her he had been once convicted of murder. She thought it was his wife. It was a young Portland woman he met in a downtown bar.

"But I was kind. I always sensed he was a disturbed person. At times worse than others. Sometimes he wouldn't even answer me. Like he was in another world. Other times he would talk up a storm.

"My husband talked to him often. Saw him Friday, and he said he was going fishing opening day Saturday. He was discussing our little camper (a trailer) we pull to the lake. And then Saturday, he was talking about the fishing and washed his truck and put polish on it. When he did go fishing, he would go tell Pearl (Pearl Lambert), manager of the court. Richard would talk to Ed specially."

Mrs. Janzen said Mrs. Lambert had called her on Saturday looking for Ed, and mentioned that "Richard" had hauled off all the junk by the garbage can.

Mrs. Lambert asked him what he had done. He proudly related that he had hauled off the old tires and board to the dump.

A block away, outside the Pepper Tree, prosperous bar and restaurant which was formerly Chuck's Steak House, Carolyn Haviland, a tall, dark-haired waitress and bartender looked up the street at the blue trailer and police cars.

"I lived next door to him when he was in the little trailer, and he gave me a ride to the Cabaret (a night spot) one night, said the woman.

"He just gave me a lift, and I knew I could get a ride when I needed it. I felt sorry for him."

She shivered in the cold wind and looked up at the blue trailer again. "He always used to say, 'Hi, Neighbor,' and I was kind of embarrassed. I didn't like him.

"I really didn't like him. But I danced with him."

She described his pickup truck and camper, blue and white. Behind the blue trailer Tuesday sat the truck's tailgate, removed so the camper could be mounted. The truck was taken away by police.

She knew he had been in prison.

"He said Murder One. I thought it was his wife. I just didn't think he would do it again. I tell you, I felt sorry for him. But I didn't like him."

"When he talked, he talked like a child," said Mrs. Enza Oswald, bookkeeper at the Salem Plumbing Co., where Richard Marquette has worked all during his parole as a plumber's assistant.

He was making $5.60 an hour and would soon be qualified as a "journeyman" at a probable salary of from $7 to $8 an hour, she said. Her boss, Otho Stone, was always helping Marquette in trying to qualify himself and always considered him "an excellent worker," she said.

Mrs. Oswald, a slender woman who came here from Italy about six years ago, has long black hair and more than her share of attention from admirers, whom she tries to sidestep.

Marquette was one, and she talked to him sometimes about his cats (a Siamese he called "Mama" and another, smaller calico) and tried to urge him to find friends.

But she didn't find Marquette quite to her liking and had her children discourage visits when he would drop by her house.

She said he called from his company van one day to explain that his battery wasn't working and wanted her to come help.

"My boss was away, and I said I can come over with the jumper cable. At that time, all I knew about him was that he had murdered someone in a fight, a man, I believed." As she was getting ready to go to where Marquette said he was, way out on Brush College Road where there were no houses, her 11-year-old son, Edward, decided to ride along.

At the van, the jump cable didn't seem to work, so she returned, only to be astonished to find Marquette arriving shortly after her with the explanation there was "a loose wire." She said she was upset about it, knowing his mechanical prowess.

The loneliness of the location of the breakdown frightened her, and she said she was pleased she had taken her son with her.

Some time later, she learned more of the nature of the first murder case and then tried to stay even more aloof from him, frequently locking herself in the company bathroom when he was there.

She said he frequently drank, once was in a car wreck and landed in jail overnight. She said people should have been told about his criminal record.

Marquette called loner, poor student in 1961 trial stood glum between his two court-appointed attorneys, Stephen King and George Van Hoomissen, to hear Circuit Judge Alan Davis pronounce the sentence.

"It will be the order of the court that the defendant will be confined to the Oregon State Penitentiary for the remainder of your lifetime," Judge Davis said.

Marquette's attorneys mentioned "No, he does not," whose dismembered body was found scattered throughout the southeast section of the city.

On Tuesday, Marquette, 40, a plumber's assistant in the Salem area, was arrested and charged with murder in the death of a woman whose dismembered body was found in a Willamette River slough.

Marquette's arrest June 30, 1961, in Santa Maria, Calif., ended a month-long manhunt that ranged over the West Coast and engaged the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which had been called into the case by the Portland Police Bureau.

The slaying, which captured national attention, occurred in Portland during Rose Festival week and came to light when parts of a human body were found in various locations a few days later.

For three weeks parts of a body were found and the victim was finally identified as Joan Rae Caudle, a 24-year-old Portland housewife.

Marquette, 27 at the time and employed part-time in a junk yard, left Portland after the slaying and headed south. He went to Mexico and then turned north again to Santa Maria where police traced him.

House visited

He was brought to trial in late November 1961, and as soon as a jury was chosen the panel members were taken to a small house at 314A SE 27th Ave. where Joan Caudle was slain and her body dismembered in the shower stall.

As the bizarre case unfolded, witnesses told of Marquette, the loner, undereducated, heavy beer drinker who, most of all, liked to go fishing.

"He tried hard not to be a discipline problem, but the 10th grade was too much for him," Leola Craig, vice principal at Roosevelt High School, told the court.

Marquette had attended Roosevelt until he dropped out to work in 1951. Miss Craig said an 8th grade achievement test had placed him at grade 3 levels in reading, grade 5 in math and grade 3 in language.

Other witnesses told of Marquette's "violent temper" as a boy of 11 years who was "white and shaking" on one occasion. Another time, witnesses said, young Marquette was enraged by another boy who turned a water hose on him.

"Dick" took after the boy with a knife and a couple of older boys finally took it away from him," Inez Sackett, a former St. Johns neighbor of Marquette, told the jurors.

In mid-December of 1961 the jury found Marquette guilty of first-degree murder. The verdict carried the jury's recommendation for life imprisonment.

On Dec. 19, Marquette

State Penitentiary for the remainder of your lifetime," Judge Davis said.

Marquette's attorneys answered, "No, he does not," when Judge Davis asked the defendant if he had anything to say. He left the courtroom in a blaze of television lights and newsmen's flashbulbs without making any statement.

The same day Marquette entered prison in Salem to start his life term. Little was heard from him or his representatives, but from time to time reports came from Salem that Richard Marquette was a "model prisoner" and was doing a "terrific job" at the prison.

In November 1972, it was announced that Marquette, then 38, would be released on parole as soon as his residence and employment were approved. It was Jan. 5, 1973, when Richard Marquette was freed.

WHERE BODY FOUND — Fisherman discovered body of Betty Lucille Wilson, 35, beneath this bridge.

Slaying victim seen child of misery

Like a persistent shadow, misery was the constant companion of Betty Lucille Wilson through her 35 years until violent death ended it early last Saturday.

Even separating herself from her past by 3,000 miles could not shake the dark cloud that finally overtook her last weekend.

Her dismembered body was found by a catfish angler last Saturday afternoon beneath a wooden bridge in the murky shallows of Brown's Island Slough, about three miles north of Salem.

Mrs. Wilson had moved to Scio, Ore., to live with a sister, Mrs. Archie Pomeroy, in January, apparently to escape her husband and a subsistence in an old bus on the outskirts of Fayetteville, N.C.

According to the Associated Press, and a former editor of the Fayetteville Times, Mrs. Wilson's exercise in misery began in 1939 when she was born into a family of 17 brothers and sisters.

Her search for affection, belonging, and her brief encounters with men, apparently brought one unhappiness after another.

She started bearing children when she was about 17 years old. And in nine years she had seven children, six girls and one boy. The AP said Fayetteville authorities believe four different men fathered the children, all of whom were believed to have been common-law husbands.

Her last husband was Paul T. Wilson, about 35. They lived for several years on some property strewn with junked car bodies. There was a trailer home on the property, but the Wilsons often rented it out and lived in an old bus, which had no plumbing facilities.

Wilson worked at a Fayetteville truck stop. By trade he was a bulldozer and backhoe operator.

Wilson apparently beat his wife on at least two occasions. Mrs. Pomeroy told detectives her sister once was beaten so badly that her eyes were swollen shut, and that she had difficulty seeing for five days.

North Carolina authorities said Wilson has served time for assault, and recently was indicted again on a charge of attempted murder of his wife.

Police said Mrs. Wilson had been attacked with a butcher knife.

Marion County detectives said Mrs. Wilson didn't smoke or drink much. She had been out of the Scio house only once for entertainment before last Friday.

Her family told Marion County detectives that Mrs. Wilson believed she was in love with any man who even looked at her. They described her as a homely woman, with facial scars and poor teeth, a 5-foot-4, 165-pound woman.

Deputies told this story of her last hours:

Mrs. Wilson left the Pomeroy home with Sherrie, Mrs. Pomeroy's daughter. They and Sherrie's boyfriend, Christopher Spellmeyer, went to the Pepper Tree Supper Club in Northeast Salem. They arrived at about 9 p.m., but Sherrie and Spellmeyer soon left, as Sherrie, who had just turned 20, was barred from the club.

They left Mrs. Wilson at the club and were gone about two hours. When they returned at 11 p.m., Mrs. Wilson told them she was having a good time, wanted to stay, and that she would meet them later at a Stayton apartment.

The young couple went to the apartment, but Mrs. Wilson didn't.

Mrs. Wilson stayed at the Pepper Tree until at least midnight. Sometime later, she was taken to a place where she was choked to death, and her body hacked to pieces and distributed along a muddy slough near a sanitary landfill.

Marion County District Atty. Gary Gortmaker said autopsy had not been able to determine whether the mutilation, which included removal of about half of the victim's fingernails, occurred before or after her death.

Boe wants tougher law on murder

By JIM CHURCH

SALEM (AP) — Oregon Senate President Jason Boe Tuesday announced the Senate would begin work immediately on a bill to tighten the state's punishment for first-degree murder.

The Reedsport Democrat asked Sen. Betty Browne, D-Oakridge, to begin drafting a bill to amend or eliminate a provision that allows a judge to give immediate probation of one to five years to a person convicted of murder.

She is chairwoman for the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Mrs. Browne said she was thinking in terms of a provision that would allow a judge to order mandatory life or a minimum prison sentence, based on the category of crime determined by the jury.

Boe also asked House Speaker Phil Lang, D-Portland, if work could be accelerated on a House bill to set ranges of punishment for classes of crimes, such as assassinations or slaying of a policeman.

Also before the House Judiciary Committee is a bill to reinstate the death penalty.

"I don't think it's wise at this time to try and reinstate the death penalty," Boe said. "I think we ought to wait until the U.S. Supreme Court decision."

The death penalty has been prohibited by Oregon since 1964. The U.S. Supreme Court, which threw out most state laws on capital punishment three years ago, is considering the issue again in a North Carolina case.

Mrs. Browne said her Judiciary Committee would begin hearings on the bill next week.

Holding up a newspaper headline saying "Ex-Portland Killer Held in Hacked-Body Slaying," Boe said, "My phone has started ringing. I'm getting calls from people who are outraged and, most of all, scared."

Boe and Mrs. Browne said they were getting public reaction from the mutilation slaying in Salem of Betty Lucille Wilson, 35, Scio, during the weekend and the killing of a sheriff's detective in Lane County.

"I think the Legislature has to react very quickly to this situation," Boe said.

Teachers demonstrate in Olympia

By DAVID AMMONS

OLYMPIA (AP) — In the largest Capitol demonstration in Washington history, 8,000 to 10,000 school teachers urged lawmakers Tuesday to take quick action to rescue financially pressed school districts.

Teachers from all over the state converged on Olympia to stage what the sponsoring Washington Education Association termed "the single most impressive action to date in replacing outmoded education funding schemes."

Arriving by chartered buses and private cars, the teachers were joined by several hundred parents and students in picketing six locations on the Capitol campus.

Further protesting was planned Wednesday, "and we have something planned for every day at least through May 1," said a WEA spokesman. Overnight camping was provided at nearby St. Martins College.

Most teachers arrived early in the morning and carried placards until a noontime rally, and resumed picketing afterwards. The jazz band from Kent-Meridian High School played on the Capitol steps, leading a festive air to the demonstration.

A light rain fell in the afternoon. Some endured it goodnaturedly and others scattered for cover.

Legislators addressed a late afternoon rally, and teachers who have been notified that they will not be rehired scheduled a night meeting at the college to discuss their legal rights and options.

"The vigil has just begun"

WEA Executive Secretary Wendell Verduin told a cheering crowd. "We will be here until we get some action."

Blair Patrick, president of the 135,000-member teacher group, said the public is "not going to idly sit by and continue listening to rhetoric from the legislature."
